$1,166,000,000 Had There Been No Roosevelt

The Elephants and Big Boy War Might Teach Us

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WASHINGTON reports that the President will ask Congress for an emergency appropriation of eleven hundred and sixty-six million dollars to carry the Civil Works Administration, Civilian Conservation Corps and direct federal relief. He hopes "to taper off the civil works program and wind it up in May."

Every Keeley cure and sanitarium for drug addiction will tell you that "tapering off" is difficult, uncertain work, but if, as announced, the President is "determined to keep the amount within the limits announced in his message to Congress," he will do it. His hope is that in a short time four million men now on the government payroll will find "normal outdoor work."

You may sympathize with President Roosevelt for one reason. He will never be able to learn on this earth, although the Judgment Day may reveal it to him, just how much he has don for the United States. He can never tell what would have happened if he had NOT appeared upon the scene, taking action immediately, scattering jobs and money, setting precedent aside, ignoring highly organized finance that in all sincerity thinks itself the only divinely chosen trustee and manager of the United States government.

He found twelve million men idle, and many of them in ugly mood. What would have happened if he had not poured out billions of dollars, creating millions of jobs, and taken from the highways an army of wandering young men and boys that might easily have formed dangerous marauding bandit gangs?

You never can tell how human beings will respond under given circumstances. Ferrero, in his thick volume on Caesar, tells of a great new "circus," for gladiator and wild beast fights, opened in Rome. Unhappy elephants, hunted to their death, horribly wounded, uttered such piteous cries that the crowd of then degenerate Romans, deeply touched would have stopped the brutality could it have done so. Ferrero remarks that the same crowd drew exquisite delight from the dying agonies of a human gladiator. The sight and sound of huge elephants, trumpeting, whimpering and groaning in agony were new, and the brutal crowd almost shed tears.

Bob Brady, nicknamed "Big Boy," desperado, and frequent jail breaker, escaped for the last time with three fellow-convicts. Cornered by the sheriff, with a posse of national guardsmen, and others heavily armed, "Big Boy" shouted: "Come on, boys, let's fight!" drew a sawed-off shotgun from under his coat, and went at the 40 men while his three friends threw up their hands. "Big Boy" is dead, full of bullets. The public is glad, and that ends him.

If, in "No Man's Land," "Big Boy," with only three comrades, had dashed forth at 40 well-armed Germans, crying: "Let's fight!" he would be one of a million minor heroes. It all depends on the motive.

Russia and Japan still talk war, Russia loudly, Japan quietly. The Japanese emperor, which means his military advisers, alone can declare war. Nobody speaks for the emperor until the time has come to act.

This country hopes for no war, but if war should come, the United States might learn valuable lessons about future wars. We should see in that war tens of thousands gassed, cities destroyed from the clouds, inhabitants sent rushing into the country to escape gas in the streets, as once, in wartime, country inhabitants rushed to cities for protection. Russian fire bombs would destroy tens of thousands of the highly inflammable Japanese dwellings.

This column said, more than 20 years ago, and has often said since, that around-the-world transportation in the future will operate as follows:

Gigantic airships, sailing at least six miles above the earth, where there are no clouds or wind, will sail round and round, dropping passengers at New York, Paris, Tokio, Peking, in small swift planes, that will land them at their destination and rejoin the big ships.

Some called that fanciful "imagination."

Now the Waco Aircraft Corporation has received contracts to build two planes, to be attached to the dirigible Macon, "to permit landing of passengers while the dirigible is in the air," instead of bringing the huge airship down to land groups of passengers.

'WILDCAT AND TARZAN' LOVE MATCH ENDS

Star and Weissmuller "Fight All Time," She Reveals

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 24—"Little Wildcat" Lupe Velez and her "Tarzan" mate, Johnny Weissmuller, have come to a parting of the ways after three months of matrimony.

Said Lupe today:

"I guess it's Hollywood. It's no use. We fight. We fight. We quit. It's fifty-fifty. I don't put the blame on him. I don't put the blame on myself. We just can't get along together."

The fiery little film actress said her actor-swimmer husband was leaving her home in Beverly Hills today and added:

"I don't think Lupe take him back."

HOLLYWOOD SURPRISED

Weissmuller didn't want to talk about it at all.

Most of Hollywood acted surprised over the rift, because for weeks, regularly on Tuesday and Thursday nights, Johnny and Lupe have been fight fans, and Johnny always cheered for Lupe's choice.

Last night they saw the fights together as usual.

But a few sophisticates wondered if the fight fever had anything to do with the case.

The marriage that "went Hollywood" was performed last October, just when neither Lupe nor Johnny would say at the time. But it followed closely after a 4 a. m. trip to Las Vegas, Nev., on Oct. 8.

BROKE WITH COOPER

It was only a few days before that Lupe told the world:

"Love-pooh, it is the bunk."

Martin Picks Three for Army and Navy

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—Frederick C. Lough and Clifford F. Macomber, both of Fall River, Mass., today were recommended for appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point by Representative Martin of Massachusetts. Raymond H. George of Wrentham was recommended for appointment to the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Token Payments by Europe Part of Scheme to Sell Debt Cut Idea to U. S. People

This is the third of five articles by William Hillman, London representative and chief of staff of the European correspondents of the Hearst papers.

Mr. Hillman's articles, obtained from state documents or authoritative statements of foreign government officials, probably will give America a clearer insight into the attitude and objectives of the Washington administration than can be obtained from news sources here at home.

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

Agents of the administration at Washington have categorically informed European debtor nations that American public opinion must be PREPARED by gradual stages TO ACCEPT THE IDEA OF WAR DEBT REVISION.

The token payments by Great Britain and Italy are considered essential STAGES in this preparation.

Agents and spokesmen of the administration outlined a scheme for reducing war debts by five billion dollars in a way that would make the plan appear ESPECIALLY ADVANTAGEOUS to the United States.

50 PER CENT CUT PROPOSED

This scheme, proposed by members of the American Treasury Department and discussed with European representatives both by American Treasury and State Department officials last spring, called for revision of war debts in the following way:

The final sum to be paid by each individual European debtor nation would be fixed, reducing the figures of the previous funded debt agreements by about 50 per cent.

Payment of the new sum agreed upon would be made:

First—Partly in gold and silver to be paid directly into the United States Treasury. This would represent a small percentage of the total payment.

Second—Notes for the remainder would be issued by European governments and deposited with the Bank of International

SCHOONER AND EIGHT MISSING

Gloucester, Jan. 24—Coast guard patrol boats and a coast guard plane roved on and above the sea today in a search for the new fishing schooner Virginia and Joan, due yesterday afternoon but unreported.

Earlier yesterday the new 65-footer, commanded by Capt. Roland Watson and carring a crew of seven men, was sighted 29 miles off Thatcher's Island, headed back toward Gloucester — but afterward she apparently vanished.

The schooner has been making daily gill-netting trips to the banks and set out yesterday at 3 a. m. She should have reached port again by 4 p. m.

A plane from Gloucester coast guard base, piloted by Walter S. Anderson, took the air at 7 a. m. today in search of the missing craft. Two hours later, Pilot Anderson radioed that he had flown as far as Portland lightship and had failed to see the schooner.

Gas Prices Up, Back Again

Gasoline prices in New England marched up and turned around and marched right down again today, with one company following another both on the way up and the way back.

The parade started when the Standard Oil Co. of New York announced a half cent a gallon boost, effective tomorrow in the New York and New England territory, the new price to be 13 cents a gallon, plus 4 cents tax.

Right away, the Colonial Beacon Oil Co., swung into line on the boost, then the Jenney Co. came in on it and other companies swung into line.

Three hours later the Standard Oil Co. announced that it had rescinded its order and that the price would remain as of today, 12½ cents and four cents tax. The Colonial Beacon Co. followed with a rescinding order, and so did the Jenney and the others.

FRED J. O'BRIEN DIES AT HOME

Fred J. O'Brien, assistant director of physical education in Boston public schools, died at his Braintree home today.

Death came after almost a year's illness, closing a career of 25 years of active work in the physical education of Boston schoolboys.

Mr. O'Brien was a noted athlete in his schoolboy days at South Boston High in 1902, and later as an undergraduate at Harvard and Bridgewater Normal, from which he was graduated in 1906.

He was first a teacher coach at Brighton High, and then at the Public Latin School, where for many years he attracted widespread attention by producing fine teams.

He became associate director of physical education in Boston schools under director, Nathaniel J. Young. He occupied this position until his death.

PETERS' SON, 18, DIES IN GEORGIA

Ex-Mayor and Mother at Boy's Bedside When End Comes

John Phillips Peters, 18, son of former Mayor Andrew J. Peters, died today of pneumonia at Warm Springs, Ga., where he was under treatment for infantile paralysis.

The death is the second in the Peters family in 15 months. John's older brother, Alanson Tucker Peters, was fatally stricken by infantile paralysis in October, 1932.

Mayor and Mrs. Peters were at Warm Springs with John, having been summoned from Boston a week ago Sunday.

The death of the second son ended a courageous battle begun a year ago last August when he became afflicted with paralysis at Rockland, Me., and was rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital by airplane.

He remained at the hospital until last January, spending most of his days in a respirator.

It was hoped he would regain his health at the Georgia resort where President Roosevelt was cured and for several months he did appear to be on the road to recovery. He had been there nearly a year.

BENEFIT GAME FOR BAILEY

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—The board of governors of the National Hockey League voted today to stage a benefit hockey game between the Toronto Maple Leafs and an all-star team selected from among the other clubs in the circuit in Toronto at a date to be selected, all the proceeds to go to Irving (Ace) Bailey, injured Toronto player.

Bailey suffered a skull fracture in a game at Boston Dec. 12 which will keep him out of hockey for at least two years and perhaps for life.

The players for the All-Star team—two from each club—will be selected by the league's board of control, consisting of President Frank Calder, Managing Director Frank Patrick and Tom Arnold of Montreal. The clubs will bear the expenses of sending them to Toronto for the game, and all other facilities are being extended free of charge so that Bailey will receive the entire proceeds.

Ford Plant Saved From B. & M. Fire

A fire of unknown origin destroyed two passenger cars in yard 21 of the Boston & Maine Railroad in the rear of the Ford motor plant in Somerville, today, causing $2000 damage.

The fire threatened the plant but quick action by firemen brought it under control before any serious damage was done.

DECLARES HE WILL NOT BE CANDIDATE THIS FALL

Gov. Joseph B. Ely today announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election and that he is "perfectly willing" to give up his job as national committeeman if anyone wants it.

He also said:

He favors Collector of Port Joseph A. Maynard holding his post as chairman of the Democratic state committee.

Thus the state's chief executive put to rest continual reports from Washington that he would run for governor this fall and at the same made known his stand on "double time duty" in Democratic ranks.

MISS WARD READY TO QUIT

The national drive to have appointive officeholders relinquish "patronage posts" in the Democratic party, begun by Postmaster-General Farley's declaration that he would quit as national chairman when his successor was appointed, had come home to Massachusetts.

Miss Ward told the Boston Evening American today that she is ready to resign if the administration so wishes.

"I suppose that anyone could serve on a political committee when times are good, but it takes a supreme sort of a fool to stick to it in bad times," she said.

"NOT A CANDIDATE"

Of the report from the capital today that Maynard had announced that Governor Ely would seek renomination and that 90 per cent of the Democratic candidates would be pledged to him, the Governor said:

"I am not a candidate. How many times must I say that? I

MAN, EX-WIFE IN FISTICUFFS

A spirited fist fight between a Watertown man and a Newton woman who was once his wife was halted today in front of Newton court house where a score of persons had gathered to urge the combatants on.

The battle was between Gertrude McDonald of Bradley st., Newton, and Loring R. McWhirter of Wttertown.

A few minutes previous they had been before a judge where Miss whom she believed was still her husband, with non-support of herself and her child.

McWhirter, to her surprise, revealed to the court that he had obtained an annulment of his marriage to her and his claim was substantiated by Middlesex Probate court records.

When the couple walked out of the courtroom, witnesses heard him mutter something to her. In an instant she hit him, witnesses said, and he lost no time in retaliating. John Enegess, court attache, stopped the battle.

Miss McDonald said she would apply for a wrarant charging McWhirter with assault and battery.

CWA WORK TO COST CITY EXTRA $75,000, OFFICIALS SAY

BOSTON ORDERED TO FOOT OVERLOADED PAYROLL

880 Men Slated for Discharge by CWA Will Be Rehired; Many to Work on School Repair Projects

Boston must dig down into municipal funds and pay out nearly $75,000 because it overloaded the CWA payroll, it was stated at CWA headquarters today.

About $60,000 must be paid by the city for men on schoolhouse projects. This is in direct contradiction to the letter of the city schoolhouse board, which told the CWA that $30,000 would be saved.

True it will be saved on the federal CWA payroll, but the city must pay out double that amount was the response from CWA Chairman Joseph W. Bartlett.

FORCE COSTS $12,000

Statistical workers, whose quota was doubled by Boston, will cost the city another $12,800.

The cross fire came after a very curt letter to Bartlett in which the Boston schoolhouse commissioners notified him that it would re-employ 880 men slated for discharge tomorrow.

". . . . Under instructions all men, excepting 181, will have to be discharged," the letter read. "No redress seems available from anybody under the CWA.

". . . The remaining men will be employed from City of Boston funds . . . After Thursday the CWA officials will have nothing whatever to do with them when so employed."

Bartlett pointed out that the schoolhouse projects called for a quota of 450 men and that 1049 were employed by mistake.

EXTRA HELP NEEDED

The city statistical force was raised from 47 to 95 because of the impossibility of a smaller force doing the clerical and payroll work required, Boston CWA Director Walter V. McCarthy said. Bartlett replied that the city must foot the extra bill.

Boston has already used $40,000 for payroll purposes out of the funds alloted for supplies, Bartlett declared

The Chelsea investigation continued today with CWA Administrator James B. Buchanan, Jr., and Alton E. Briggs, federal reemployment director, summoned before the afternoon session of the legal department of the CWA.

State Director M. Joseph McCartin again reiterated that Briggs had not been asked to resign by him.

FRICTION IS REVEALED

There is considerable friction between the legal department and McCartin's office, it was hinted, and while McCartin accepts recommendations, they say he resents his appointees being openly criticized by the legalities before he has passed on cases.

Investigation in Chelsea so far has disclosed no open cases of "favoritism," it was said, but there are many "irregularities," one of which is connected with a $350 item. The nature of the item, CWA officials refused to reveal.

LONG FOES WIN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, Jan. 24 (AP)—Sen. Huey P. Long's political machine today had apparently met its first major defeat at the polls in six years, as unofficial and incomplete returns from yesterday's mayoralty primary continued to send the Walmsley old regular faction far out in front in a four-cornered race for city hall control.

The Long candidate for mayor, John Klorer, was running more than 14,000 votes behind Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley on the face of returns from 240 of the city's 262 precincts this morning, but Klorer headquarters and Sen. Long continued to withhold a statement on whether the issue would be forced into the second run-off primary.

The unofficial returns from 240 precincts showed Walmsley 41,066; Klorer 26,854; Francis Williams, Independent anti-Long campaigner, 23,682, and Herbert B. Holmes, Independent non-factional candidate, about 500.

WOMAN SUES 'L' FOR $50,000

Suit for $50,000 against the Boston Elevated, brought by Mrs. Freida Skriganoff of 13 Grove st., West End, for injuries sustained in a fall at the Essex st. station, was begun today before Federal Judge Hugh D. McLellan and a jury.

The suit was brought in federal court because of citizenship. Mrs. Skriganoff, a native of Germany, alleges that on Nov. 18, 1932, she entered the north-bound entrance to Essex st. station of the Elevated and that through the negligence of the company in not having proper safeguards, fell, injuring her left hip and sustaining other injuries which incapacitated her.

BIG NAVY BILL PASSES HOUSE

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—The appropriation bill carrying $284,747,000 for the navy next fiscal year was passed today by the House and sent to the Senate.

Although the measure appropriates $33,619,334 for ship construction to bring the fleet up to treaty limits, it does not provide for replacement of ships which are or will be over useful age when the London treaty expires Dec. 31, 1936.

There was no roll call vote.

Earleir, the House naval committee had abandoned plans to seek enactment of the Vinson bill as an amendment to the regular supply bill for the navy department. The Vinson bill would provide for a construction program to bring the navy to treaty limits.

CAPONE AID IS SLAIN IN ROW

Chicago, Jan. 24 (US)—"Three Fingered Jack" White, notorious gunman and labor racketeer, was shot dead at midnight in an elegantly furnished Oak Park apartment.

White apparently was slain in a quarrel with three men who had been drinking with him, for police found empty beer and whiskey bottles and half filled glasses in the dining room.

Kidnap Notes Crash Glass

D'PRIEST WARS ON CAFE BAN

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—The lone Negro member of the House, Rep. Oscar De Priest, Illinois Republican, served notice on the Democratic majority today of an attempt to force a floor vote as to whether Negroes should be barred from the House restaurant.

"I am going to see to it that Negroes eat there, or we can close it," said the angered De Priest.

Rep. Warren, North Carolina Democrat, who heads the committee in charge of the restaurant, replied:

"It has never served Negro employes or visitors, nor will it so long as I have anything to do with it."

The squabble started yesterday when De Priest's secretary, Morris Lewis, went to the grill room of the restaurant, accompanied by a Negro friend, and ordered food. A Negro waiter refused to serve him. First the manager and then Representative Warren were called. De Priest immediately objected and declared later he would force a House vote on a privileged resolution to gain a decision.

Berlin, Jan. 24—President Von Hindenburg has recovered from his recent illness and resumed work, it was officialy announced.

POISON LIQUOR CAUSES DEATH

Poison liquor took its first post-prohibition victim in Boston today, with the death at City Hospital of William Ryan, 45, of East 4th st., South Boston.

Police began an immediate investigation to determine where Ryan obtained the liquor, and to stamp out its sale.

Last Sunday three Walpole farm workers were killed by poison liquor they purchased in Norwood and consumed on a Walpole farm. Investigation proved, however, they had bought bootleg liquor from a Norwood man.

Since liquor went on sale legally Dec. 5, there have been no cases of poison liquor reported up to today, in Boston.

Choate Serves U. S. as $1 a Year Man

Washington, Jan. 24 (INS)—Joseph H. Choate, Jr., chairman of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, is serving the government as a dollar-a-year man, it was revealed in hearings on the Treasury appropriation bill today.

Choate, a personal friend of President Roosevelt, was called to the job from his New York law office after repeal of the prohibition amendment.

BREMER KIN ON MYSTERY TRIP

By THOMAS F. CULLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 24—Contact with the kidnapers of Edward R. Bremer, banker, who has been missing seven days, was reported to be a possibility today when it became known that Otto Bremer, brother of Adolph, father of the abducted banker, was on a mysterious trip out of town last night.

At the same time Walter M. Magee, who has been chief adviser to the family, was not in his usual place at the Bremer home, adding further significance to the absence of Otto.

Adolph Bremer, however, insists no contracts have been made with the kidnapers. Unconfirmed reports to the effect that Bremer will be released within the next 24 hours are still current.

Adolph Bremer today excoriated the police and certain newspapers, blaming them for his failure to contact the abductors who are demanding $200,000 ransom.

Dr. H. T. Nippert, family physician, was the center of a majority of the reports which designated him as the "contact man."

It was said that two notes were placed in a bottle and the bottle hurled through the glass in the front door of his residence. Although he admitted that a bottle was thrown in his doorway he vigorously denied that it contained any notes.

SEN. FLETCHER LEADS GOLD BILL FIGHT

Borah and Glass Assail Roosevelt Money Measure

BY WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 24 (INS)—A plea for speedy passage of the administration's gold bill, the most important monetary measure since the Federal Reserve act, was made in the Senate today by Senator Fletcher (D.) of Florida.

Opening the fight for passage of the bill, Fletcher declared, "it is important to make as much speed as we can."

Fletcher plunged into an explanation of the amendments made to the bil lby the Senate banking and currency committee, of which he is chairman.

OPPOSES BOARD OF 5

He opposed the committee amendment to create a board of five members as administrators of the proposed two thousand million dollar equalization fund.

"I think the board of five members to handle a confidential fund like this would lead to delay and confusion," he declared.

"Under the House bill, the fund would be administered by the Secretary of the Treasury. It would be more desirable to have one man handle it and that man should be the Secretary of the Treasury. I believe this amendment should be defeated."

Fletcher pointed out that under the committee amendment, the governor of the federal reserve board would be a member of the foreign exchange board.

"There might be conflicts and antagonism between the treasury department and the federal reserve board," he asserted. "I feel it would be undesirable to invite any such conflict."

Fletcher then turned to the committee amendments setting a three-year time limit on operations of the stabilization fund and on the President's power to revalue the gold content of the dollar between a 50 and 60-cent limit.

"I do not regard these amendments as vital and I shall make no protest against them," he stated.

The bill was described by Sen. Glass (D.) of Virginia as "largely inflationary." Sen. Borah (R.) of Idaho criticized it because no mandatory inflation was provided.

"The secretary of the treasury might not inflate at all,' 'said Borah. "That's the trouble."

ASKS SEIZURE DETAILS

"If theer is not enough gold to go around, to redeem paper money, what difference does it make whether the gold is held in the Treasury or in the Federal Reserve banks? I want to know whether the bill is inflationary or not."

Senator Barkley (D) of Kentucky asserted that devaluation of the dollar by 40 to 50 per cent would "create new wealth of thin air," thereby exerting an inflationary effect.

Glass deplored the prospect of rapid increase in commodity prices, asserting it would "create destitution among the middle classes and salaried workers that is almost indescribable."

'Here She Comes, There She Goes,' Means New Train

Los Angeles, Jan. 24—Streaking across the country at almost two miles a minute, the fastest train ever built soon will reach Los Angeles.

Announcement of its impending arrival was made here by Union Pacific officials who said that trial tests will be made next week.

Forecasting a complete revolution in train construction, this new high-speed, light weight streamline creation of technicians and scientists is xpected to develop a maximum speed of 110 miles an hour.

Its 600 horsepower engine drives a directly connected generator. The train is made up of three cars, which weigh altogether no more than the ordinary Pullman.

Boston commuters would welcome this new high-speed, light-weight, stream-lined passenger train which the Union Pacific Railroad is about to test. One-third less weight, 110 miles per hour and low slung, it resembles a monster airplane fuselage. (International News Photos.)

60 INDICTED IN AUTO FRAUD

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 24 — Sixty indictments, returned by the Hillsborough County Grand Jury in the so-called auto insurance fraud cases, have been ordered impounded by the court for the present.

The indictments were not returned until nightfall, the entire day being required in the presentation of evidence by Atty.-Gen. Francis W. Johnston and County Solicitor John J. Sheehan.

Stand By U. S. Constitution, Or Battle It Openly, Says R. W. Childs

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

We must either stand by the Constitution or scuttle it.

To fail to do one or the other is merely to play a game of national hypocrisy while those who want revolution nibble at the Constitution and treat our whole system of government and of national organization as if it were something to be wheedled away from the American people.

Those who want to scrap it should say so. Those who want to bury it should stick their knife into its chest and not sneak up behind it.

GLASS PUTS QUESTION FORWARD

Senator Carter Glass, seasoned, peppery veteran of intellect and of American public service, swings the question before our eyes.

Carter Glass called our attention to the fact that under constitutional law the government can commandeer through legislation but compensation must not be legislated but must be set by our courts.

There were remarks about "Tories" and the "old-fashioned rugged individualism," under which America has grown to its present greatness, decreed to be a thing of the musty past.

There were breaths about the impossibility of the "return to the status quo ante."

One would think to hear all this about an old and sound democratic stand that the whole country, led by a coterie of brain monopolists, had agreed that the Constitution was only just an obstacle left in the way of progress.

DID NOT REJECT CONSTITUTION

When the Supreme Court in the Minnesota moratorium case upheld the statute for purposes of emergency the same crowd of "get-out-of-our-way-liberals" tried to throw roses on Justice Hughes' head exactly as if he had by his deciding weight—as he had not—thrown the Constitution out the window onto the garbage pile.

Is their purpose to ask the democratic tradition to dictate a new one to the stenographer?

Is the idea to use this emergency to make the American people forget that our government system as a system has stood up for more years and harbored more of the oppressed and brought more prosperity to the multitude and more peace to mankind a day than any other system in the world?

SHOULD KEEP CHARTS

The attempts to rush on in an emergency to commitments for permanent ham-stringing of the American Constitution added to the supine and doubtless unconstitutional gagging of the legislative function of our government will not help the President much in the end.

On a referendum the American people might command:

New voyages, even the Congress today may agree, do not require that the compass, log line and charts should be thrown into the raging sea.

INSULL'S LAST APPEAL FAILS

Athens, Jan. 25 (INS)—The Greek state council today rejected Samuel Insull's appeal against a government order compelling him to leave the country by Jan. 31.

As a result the former Chicago Utilities magnate's only apparent hope to remain in Greece beyond the end of the month lay in the possibility of a 10 or 15-day extension of his residence permit on grounds of ill health.

With Insull's deportation now virtually assured, American authorities looked toward taking him back to the United States at an early date to face charges of fraudulent bankruptcy in connection with the collapse of his $2,000,000,000 Utilities empire.

He is closely guarded from visitors, who are told he is ill in bed.

WOMAN, FATHER FINED IN RAID

Charles Morse, 60, of Spencer st., Dorchester, and his daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Hicks of Ferry st., Newburyport, were fined $200 each today in Dorchester district court on charges of keeping and exposing and manufacturing intoxicating liquors.

The case grew out of a raid on the Dorchester address a few weeks ago by Police Sergeant Herbert Dwyer and federal men. They found a 300-gallon still in operation and 15 200-gallon vats containing mash on the second floor.

The weight of the plant was so great that the floor was buckling under it.

WAR VETERAN HANGS SELF

Henry Miller, 40, a war veteran, hanged himself today from a beam in the cellar of his home at 3 Ridge rd., East Weymouth. A woman arriving to do housework found his body. Miller was a widower. He had been despondent a long time and once before attempted suicide.

CWA MESSAGE IS READY FOR CONGRESS

Roosevelt Prepares to 'Ask' for Power to Deal With Debts

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt was ready today to ask Congress for $850,000,000 to carry on the Civil Works Administration until May and to provide additional relief throughout the fall.

Out of the $500,000,000 relief fund the President is prepared to use money for continuation beyond May 1 if necessary.

However, he is asking only the $350,000,000 necessary to continue the CWA until May, confident that a vast majority of the 4,000,000 workers now on the federal payrolls will have been absorbed by that time by private industry and the normal seasonal pickup on the farms.

DRAFTS MARKET MESSAGE

Also upon the President's desk, about ready for a ticket to Congress, were formulae for permanent regulation of the stock exchanges and for the nation's communications systems.

A Commerce Department study on stock exchanges, handed to Mr. Roosevelt late yesterday, was stated authoritatively today to suggest no immediate drastic regulation.

The chief executive also was known to be preparing for early dispatch a message asking authority to deal with foreign nations on the tariff and war debts.

ASKS CCC FUNDS

The emergency budget message in addition to asking CWA continuance through the spring until mid-April to May 1, requests $300,000,000 for a second year of the civilian conservation corps.

Meanwhile the President and his aides looked over numerous complaints, described as being mostly from political sources, about the uses of CWA funds in various communities. The complaints were described as charging in most instances that local agencies are using funds to build up political parties.

The President has asked that the protests be investigated.

"Good COMPANY"

I'M ONLY A TELEPHONE, but even my silent presence is good company.

You may be alone, but you are not lonesome if I am there. Why? Because you know that, if you so desire, you can chat with others, anywhere. And you also know that others can call you, if need be. Therefore, your mind is easy and contented, even if I am silent.

On the other hand, I can become a regular gossip, if you are in the mood to talk. For keeping you in touch with friends who live too far away to be seen often; for regular friendly chats with nearby acquaintances; for contacts between separate families—if I do say so, as perhaps shouldn't, there is no substitute for my service.

ART CURATOR LYTHGOE DYING, TUT'S CURSE BLAMED

DOCTORS FIGHT TO SAVE NOTED SCIENTIST

Pharoah Controversy Rages Anew on Carnarvon Companion

Physicians battled today at Massachusetts General Hospital in an apparently hopeless attempt to pull back from the brink of death Albert M. Lythgoe, famous Egyptologist — and meanwhile controversy raged as to a possible up-flare of King Tutankhamen's curse.

Twenty victims have been credited by some to the curse supposed to have been placed on those who entered the tomb of the ancient Pharaoh king, and the dying Egyptologist was held up by some as the possible 21st.

The scientist, according to a friend of the family, collapsed a week ago yesterday from hardening of the arteries in the brain, and except for a brief lucid moment on Sunday and another today, he has been in a coma since.

OVERWORK BLAMED

Physicians at the hospital are declared by the family friend to blame the condition of the former curator of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and more recently of the Metropolitan Museum in New York, to an ever-active life with no time taken out for relaxation.

Regarding the legend of the King Tut curse, however, Dows Dunham, curator of the Egyptian department at the Museum of Fine Arts, scoffed today and declared the scientist's condition had nothing to do with his presence at the opening of the ancient tomb in Egypt back more than a decade ago.

In refutation of the legend, Curator Dunham recited a long list of names of members of the expedition which excavated the tomb, and said that except for Lord Carnarvon, backer of the expedition, all members are alive.

LEGEND RECALLED

According to the legend, the vengeance of the mouldering Pharaoh has reached out over the seas from the tomb, fastening its blight on all who had any connection with disturbing the sarcophagus of the 4000-year dead ruler of Egypt.

This legend brought another frown from Curator Dunham today. The Egyptologist declared that while in many of the ancient tombs in Egypt warnings were posted that the gods of the mummies interred would wreak vengeance on all who violated the tombs—there was no such warning found in the Tutankhamen sarcophagus.

Lord Carnarvon, who died in Egypt not many months after the treasures had been removed from the Tut tomb, fell a victim to blood poisoning when he scratched a mosquito bite, Curator Dunham asserted.

GOULD STRICKEN

Also cited a victims of the Pharaoh curse since then have been George Jay Gould, who was stricken while wandering through the Valley of Kings and who died; Woolf Joel, English sportsman; Sir Archibald Douglas Reid and Frederick Raleigh, X-ray experts, and Arthur E. Weigall, noted British archeologist.

But none of these, it was asserted by Curator Dunham, was a member of the Carnarvon expedition.

PHARAOH COFFIN BORNE OUT

ILLNESS DELAYS GIRL'S SUIT

Resumption of the suits totalling $200,000 brought by Miss Dorothy A. Stowe of Commonwealth ave, Allston, against Sam A. Mason, 2d, of Memorial Drive, Cambridge, was postponed today in Suffolk Superior Court when Robert Gallaghar of defense counsel was reported ill.

Miss Stowe is seeking to collect for injuries she received when Mason's automobile crashed into a freight car on Atlantic ave., in September, 1932.

The suits are directed against Mason, for $100,000 and against the Union Freight R. R. and the New Haven R. R. for a like amount.

Yesterday Mason took the stand in his own defense and denied that he was drunk on the night of the crash. He said he had had a few drinks during the evening and at dinner, but was not under the influence at any time. He blamed a depression in the street for his losing control of the machine so that it struck the freight car.

Albert Lythgoe, noted Egyptologist and former curator of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts is dying it is said from the curse of Tutamkhamen.

Robbery Victims to Confront Suspects

Victims of a Revere holdup will view the four men arrested yesterday in a Tremont st. restaurant at the lineup at police headquarters today in an effort to identify them as participants in the robbery.

HORNBLOWER IS VICTIM OF HIS THIRD BURGLAR

Two Cottages Looted in Plymouth, Auto Robbed of Silver

It began to look today as though burglars had joined in an organized drive against Henry Hornblower, Beacon Hill banker and broker, of the Hornblower & Weeks firm.

Medford police investigating the theft of $2000 worth of Hornblower silver were informed today that the main cottage and the bathing cottage of the Hornblowers at Plymouth had been pillaged.

At the same time Daniel Shea, the broker's chauffeur, said his home in Chetwynd rd., Somerville, near the Medford line had been entered.

The silver was taken from the Hornblower automobile, which was left locked in a private storeroom in a Boston ave., Medford, garage over the week-end.

Chauffeur Shea had packed it for transportation to the winter estate of the Hornblowers in Pinehurst, N C

DOCTOR AND SIX FLEE FLAMES

Brockton, Jan. 24—A two-alarm fire in the home of Dr. George A. Buckley, of the Brockton and Massachusetts General Hospital staffs, at 20 Bassett rd., here, today caused damage estimated at $4000. The blaze, caused by a basement heater, mushroomed through the walls, forcing the doctor, his wife, four children and a maid to take refuge with neighbors.

HARVARD MAN IN PLEA TO OUST WOODRING

Prof. Allport and 29 Protest Army Article by War Dept. Aid

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Educators of thirty colleges and universities demanded of President Roosevelt today the resignation of Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war, because of a magazine article in which he proposed organization of "economic storm troops" through federal relief administration.

Among those protesting Woodring's statements are E. A. Ross, professor of sociology, University of Wisconsin; Robert Morss Lovett, professor of English, University of Chicago; Edward Hulme, professor of history, Stanford University; Gordon Allport, professor of history, Harvard University; Broadus Mitchell, professor of economics, Johns Hopkins; M. E. Curti, professor of history, Smith College, and Colston E. Warne, professor of economics, Amherst College.

The demand for Woodring's resignation was based on an article written by the War Department official in Liberty entitled "The American Army Stands Ready."

The educators called Woodring's statement, that the army "is our ace in the hole for peace as well as war," a "totally unwarranted threat to the civil liberties of the American people" and a veiled advocacy of Nazi dictatorship.

"Were we deceived," the letter asked of the President, "when, in response to vigorous protests against apparent militarization of the C. C. C. at its formation, the people were assured that militarization was not even considered? If not, then Mr. Woodring has made presumptuous and dangerous assumptions as to his official function with reference to this branch of the federal relief and conservation program.

"We contend that Mr. Woodring's suggestion 'to organize the veterans of the World War, the CCC Men, and through them the administration of relief into a system of economic storm troops,' is not even a thinly veiled advocacy of the German Nazis dictatorship methods."

FINNERAN TRIAL PUT OFF

Leroy H. Burns of Seaverns ave., Jamaica Plain, was held in $10,000 bail until Feb. 1, when he appeared in municipal court today to answer manslaughter charges in connection with the death of Frank J. Finneran, late president of the Massachusetts Democratic Club.

The district-attorney's aides asked the continuance so they might get "further information" about the night on which Burns allegedly punched Finneran, knocking him to the curb and causing the fatal skull fracture. Burns' attorney, John M. Boyle, objected to the delay.

Girl Teachers Flee Fire in Nighties

Woodstock, Ct., Jan. 24 (INS)—Fire today destroyed the home of Miss Marian Lancaster here, with total damage estimated at $15,000. Miss Lancaster and two teachers of Woodstock Academy, Miss Kirby and Miss Kearns, were forced to flee the burning building in nightclothes.

MATHESON CASE UP TO HULTMAN

Boston detectives returned from Nova Scotia today convinced they had talked with the man who killed Maybelle Matheson in West Roxbury, seven years ago.

"The case isn't closed and when an arrest is made it will be made in Nova Scotia," said Capt. Stephen J. Flaherty on his arrival from Yarmouth with Inspector Robert McGeouch.

Asked whether an indictment would be sought on the evidence gathered, Flaherty said Police Commr. Hultman would make the decision.

Capt. Flaherty stated the man he suspects of the murder may be arresed by the Canadian police in connection with the assault on Mabel Farrington, at Barrington, N. S., a case which he reopened in the Matheson probe.

Regarding Hilton Scott, the Barrington suspect questioned by Boston deectives, Capt. Flaherty said:

"He has the finest lapse of memory of anyone I ever questioned."

MAXWELL SEES EX-WIFE TODAY

Prepared to convince his first wife that he is the husband she believed died on the battlefields of France in 1918, James Z. Robertson, known here as John W. Maxwell, was on his way by plane from Newark, N. J., to Oklahoma City today.

Maxwell is chief pharmacist's mate at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Chelsea. He lives in Waltham with a second wife, married after wife No. 1 obtained a divorce.

Maxwell was called by Department of Justice agents to confront his wife, now Mrs. Nora V. Demaree, who is attempting to collect $5000 war-risk insurance which he husband took out when he enlisted and to which she believed herself entitled after Maxwell was reported missing in action.

Maxwell's Boston wife was missing from the station platform as he boarded a train for the West. His second wife declared, however, that she would be waiting to greet him on his return.

Girl Gets Suspended Term

Betty Fox, 25, of Kineo st., Roxbury, found guilty on four counts of larceny by Judge Charles L. Carr in the municipal court today, was given a suspended sentence of four months. The defendant, a salesgirl, admitted stealing more than $2500 over a period of several years.

25,000 Dead in Indian Quake

Calcutta, Jan. 24 (AP)—An appalling toll beyond any previously hinted may be reached in India's earthquake dead, it was indicated today when the Rajah of Monghyr said deaths in Manghyr alone have reached 25,000.

It will be weeks, he added, before ruins can be removed to reveal the incalculable bodies buried by the earthquakes last week which shook the region during the important Moslem festival of Eidul Fitr. The rajah predicted two generations will pass before the devastated areas can be rehabilitated.

Authorities generally appear anxious to conceal the true proportions of the disaster, but nothing can hide that fact that it is India's biggest calamity in generations.

REPLY FILED IN BEACON CASE

Five trustees of Old Colony Trust Associates filed answer in superior court today to the equity suit brought in November by small shareholders, alleging breach of fiduciary duty and seeking an accounting.

Francis R. Hart, Philip Dexter, Gordon Abbott, Philip Stockton and Robert F. Herrick, who are among the trustees sued, maintain in answer:

That the trust was not formed so the Old Colony Trust Co., could acquire control of other trust companies;

That the 400,000 shares of the Associates were not sold by the trust company;

That purchase of $2,360,000 in First National Bank shares was in open market and not a violation of trust; and that the trust did not suffer a $1,860,000 loss in consequence;

That at the time of a $900,000 loan to the Everett Trust Co., the insolvency of the company was not known.

'He Told Me to Slay,' Says Tryst Killer on Stand

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Mrs. Millie Prince, on trial for murder, avers that in killing Charles J. Wolfert she had the special permission of Wolfert himself.

"He took a card from his pocket," she testified at her trial, "and wrote on the card and handed it to me. He had written:

"Millie Prince, you can kill me. I deserve it."

Mrs. Prince

He was dead a few minutes later. In his body were 19 stab wounds from a knife Mrs. Prince carried in her handbag and which her husband had bought for her as a souvenir of their trip to Miami.

Mrs. Prince, 31, and mother of a 10-year-old boy, told in considerable detail of the conversation that led to the slaying of her 56-year-old admirer. He had "pursued" her for five years, she testified, with avowals of love.

FEARED HIS GUN

On Sept. 6 last, she said, he confronted her on the street and compelled her to go to a wooded place not far away, she obeyed his command in the belief that his concealed right hand gripped a pistol.

A strange feature of the conversation that took place just before Wolfert's death was that, despite its tragic portent, it was carried on (according to Mrs. Prince's testimony) most formally. She was "Mrs. Prince" and he was "Mr. Wolfert."

Parts of her testimony were:

"He said, 'Mrs. Prince, I'll kill you,' and I said: 'Mr. Wolfert, how could you be so cruel?' "

"He grabbed me and kissed me, and I said: 'Get away, you rat!' Your kisses are poison!' "

"He picked up a rock and said: 'I could smash your brains out, Mrs. Prince, with this rock.' I said: 'If I had any brains I wouldnt' be here.' "

"THEN I STABBED HIM!"

She said Wolfert "grabbed me and threw me around," and that he then wrote the "permission to kill" card. As she opened her handbag to put the card away she saw the knife and drew it out.

" 'That knife won't stop me,' " she testified Wolfert said as he grabbed her.

"I stabbed him with the knife," she added. "I stabbed him again and again."

Two hours later she walked into a police station, tossed the knife on the sergeant's desk and announced she had just killed a man.

TOKIO MUZZLES PRESS ON WAR PREDICTIONS

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service Correspondent

Tokio, Jan. 24 — Japan in future will exercise control over publications which predict wars involving the United States, Russia and Japan, cabinet members told the House of Peers yesterday.

Subjected to rigorous interpellations, General Senjiro Hayashi, new minister of war, stated:

"I recognize that magazines fanning war sentiment should be checked when they maliciously cater to the imagination of the public."

Hayashi made this assertion in reply to Count Yoshinori Futara, who assailed propagation of warlike sentiments. Count Futara said:

"I doubt the so-called national spirit is really a true reflection of Japanese ideals."

He demanded that Premier Saito, Minister of Navy Osumi and Gen. Hayashi express their opinions. They replied they would "control" the magazines.

PLEADS OR PEACE

The interpellations advanced by the peers followed the speech by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, in which he pleaded for understanding between nations and maintenance of peace. Hirota said Japan wants the friendship of the United States, but deplored the attitude toward Japan prevailing in Soviet Russia.

The Tokio newspaper Hochi carried a special dispatch from Washington which said:

"Every article from W. R. Hearst's correspondent in Tokio becomes exaggerated in America, intimating Japan will declare war on America."

The article was accompanied by a large photograph of Mr. Hearst. It added:

"The Hearst papers have secured Premier Mussolini's assistance in their campaign against Japan. It is outrageous to take advantage of a Japanese article on war."

It was presumed this was a reference to an article in the magazine Gendai, published in the Hearst newspapers, in which Admiral Suetsugu warned Japan to defend herself against the United States.

WAIT ROOSEVELT'S VIEWS

Referring to a recent speech by Stanley K. Hornbeck, chief of the far eastern division of the American State Department, reaffirming the doctrine of non-recognition of governments established by force, the dispatch stated:

"Hornbeck probably delivered the speech without a correct understanding of President Roosevelt's views. Until the President's policy regarding the Orient is better known, Japan will be wise to pay little attention to the utterances of state department officials."

London, Jan. 24 (INS)—Declaring they were provocative and liable to disturb friendly relations, Tamekichi Ota, Japanese ambassador to Moscow, today called the attention of the Soviet government to recent utterances by Russian officials accusing Japan of preparing to invade the Siberian maritime provinces and seize the Chinese Eastern railway, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tokio.

Ota, the dispatch said, characterized the Soviet reply to his representation as "unsatisfactory and evasive." The Soviets, he said, mentioned a repored anti-Russian demonstration in Tokio on Jan. 20

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER LUPE VELEZ
A month after Lupe Velez eloped with and wed Johnny Weissmuller in Las Vegas, Nev., last October, Lupe announced the marriage and said: "I love him, my Johnny, very, very much." Today she said: "We fight, fight, fight! We quit! I don't think Lupe take 'im back!"

know the chairman made that statement with the best intentions. But delegates to the primary convention should not be pledged to anyone."

When asked where Chairman Maynard received authority for his statement, he replied:

"I don't know."

"Will you communicate your feelings to Maynard?" he was asked.

"I'll talk with him. It isn't that I wouldn't like to be governor for a third term. I am not disgusted with political office, in fact I enjoy public service. But I think it joy public service. But I think that it is better for the state to change its chief executive every four years. Personal reasons leave me without choice."

The Governor was told o fthe reports that the administration would like to divorce officeholders from party posts.

"Any time they'd like my office as national committeeman, I'd be glad to give it to them," he responded.

He was asked if being a national committeeman buried him with extra work entailed by office-seekers and patrons.

"No, they don't bother me," he replied. "Probably because I have stated publicly so many times that I am not interested in patronage. It doesn't belong to either Miss Ward or myself. Futhermore, I think Mary Ward and Joe Maynard ought to stay where they are."

Gov. Ely spoke highly of Miss Ward's qualifications, terming her as competent, honest, able, and adding:

"I can't see any difficulty in her remaining as national committeewoman after being appointed immigration commissioner, or in the reverse, remaining on the job and continuing as national committeewoman."

TREASURY AND P. O. BILL CUT

Washington, Jan. 24—Powerful rum syndicates backed by millions of dollars shortly will increase their extensive smuggling activities along American coast and border lines, it was disclosed today in a report attached to the Treasury Department appropriation bill.

Commander F. J. Gorman, intelligence officer of the coast guard, declared the organizations hitherto engaged in smuggling liquor are now extending their operations to include aliens, narcotics and various articles carrying a high duty.

An increase of $185,429,629 in interest payments on the public debt and the sinking fund next year was reported today by the Appropriations Committee in presenting the annual Treasury and post office supply bill.

Carrying out the policy of the administration to slash ordinary expenditures, the committee recommended a decrease from $1,224,316,597 to $820,693,270 i operating funds for the Treasury and post office department in the fiscal year beginning July 1. These expenditures are separated from the public debt requirements.

Constitutional restrictions seriously hamper the fight of the federal government to stamp out race horse doping, it was revealed in a report of hearings on the Treasury appropriation bill.

H. J. Anslinger, commissioner of the Bureau of Narcotics, declared the government could not place a veterinarian at the various tracks to examine race horses. He said he was consulting with Treasury Department legal experts preparatory to drafting possible legislation to give the government more power in this matter.

"That's the only way—forget," she explained.

The Velez-Weissmuller romance began soon after a definite smashup with Gary Cooper on the part of the "little wildcat" whose name had been coupled with Cooper's for years.

Weissmuller champion swimmer, had come into the Hollywood scene and won laurels for his portrayal of "Tarzan" in the picturization of the Edgar Rice Burrough's story. At the time he was tagged to Bobbie Arnst, musical comedy actress.

FIGHT FROM FIRST

He fell for the little Mexican, and despite several violent quarrels they got along.

It got so far with Ritz, a New Yorker playing in a stage show with Lupe, that they had the five-day waiver. Then Lupe gave him the go-by.

That jilt coincided with Armistice Day in 1932. The Sheehan romance had just died a natural death a short time before.

Lupe was once linked with Jack Gilbert, who had been regarded as Greta Garbo's property at the time—which was in 1931.

A long distance call from London, just after Gilbert had been legally freed from Ina Claire, asked Lupe to join him in the English capital.

GARY COOPER WED NOW

Lupe pooh-poohed any suggestion of love in that quarter.

Gary Cooper the silent strong man who occupied the limelight with Lupe for so long is still in the bridegroom stage. He was married only a month ago to Veronica Balfe, New York debutante, who acts under the name of Sandra Shaw.

Clara Bow and Carole Lombard had been nominated as Cooper's "hearts" on different occasions, but the movie colony regarded the little Mexican Lupe as his true love, until the Wessmuller entre.

Anyhow Lupe always said she liked her little adopted daughter, Joan, who is 6, better than any man alive. Maybe they're going back to a twosome.

But Thursday night, everyone is going to see if Lupe goes to the box-fights.

GUEST BLAMED IN GEM THEFT

Just a friend of the family who steals his hostess' jewels and then seeks to "shake her down" for their return is the way police today described Paul Baker, 26, of Fayette st., South End.

The man was arrested by Inspectors John A. Dorsey, Edward J. Keating and William L. Tooher, charged with the larceny of two diamond rings, valued at $1010, from Mrs. Mabel Southard, 67 West Cedar st., West End, and of attempting to extort $200 from her.

According to the charges in municipal court, Baker took the rings in the absence of his hostess while he was a guest in her home.

Then he pawned them and wrote a letter to a nephew of the woman, suggesting that her daughter, Frances, take a package, containing $200, to a friend of his to obtain the return of the jewels. Baker also insisted that Mrs. Southard ask the police to drop their investigation of the case. She ignored the request.

CURATOR DYING OF 'TUT CURSE'

the expedition, said Dunham is still alive; Mr. Burton, the photographer, is alive and Dunham saw him last week; Mr. Lucas, a scientist, is alive, and so are Edward Robinson; H. E. Winlock, present curator of the Egyptian department at the Metropolitan Museum; Dr. Allen Gardner, philologist; Prof. James H. Breasted; Dr. Derry of Cairo; a Mr. Hall and a Mr. Hauser, draughtsmen with the expedition; another philologist named Newberry, an expert on scarabs; Dr. Lacau, director-general of the antique department of the Egyptian government, and Mr. Engelbach, his assistant.

LYTHGOE RETIRED

All these men, according to Curator Dunham, were members of the Carnarvon-Carter expedition in 1923, when the Tutankhamen tomb was opened.

Curator Lythgoe, while not an actual member of the expedition, was present at the opening of the tomb, and believers in the ancient legend refuse to be moved from their belief that the curse exists.

The dying scientist is 60 years old and retired three years ago from office to prepare his papers on Egypt before going to work on the writing of a book on his Egyptian studies through the years.

According to the family friend, he had complained of feeling ill just before Christmas, but when examined by a physician he was told the illness was trivial and temporary.

CURATOR COLLAPSES

A week ago yesterday, however, he collapsed and was removed to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where he has been in a coma except for brief intervals on Sunday and yesterday.

His wife is at the Hotel Sheraton in the Back Bay, but has been forced to take to her bed and is under the care of a physician, her condition being brought on by her noted husband's collapse.

Mrs. Lythgoe is a native of Pomfret, N. H., where the couple have a summer home.

"There is no poison know to modern science which could have endured for nearly 4000 years and caused illness to those who entered the tomb," said Dr. Francis P. McCarthy, noted toxicologist of Tufts Medical School.

On the basis of the gold and silver paid by the debtors, the United States Treasury would issue non-interest bearing treasury bills. These bills would be taken up by the Federal Reserve Banks which would use them as a basis of an issue of currency notes.

The notes deposited by the European debtors with the Bank of International Settlements would be used for loan issue which the United States Treasury by a complicated and intricate banking arrangement could also use for the issuance of American treasury bills. And these bills would be converted by Federal Reserve Banks into further issues of currency notes.

This plan it was thought could be represented as advantageous to the country for the purpose of furthering public works and other federal schemes.

GOLD SURRENDER HURTS

But six billion dollars as a final settlement was considered TOO HIGH by Europe.

Europe wants further drastic downward revision.

And giving up gold in any substantial amounts is not popular with Great Britain or France.

Agents of the administration have conceded that further modifications to meet European objections are necessary.

But the machinery to utilize the Bank of International Settlements whereby notes or bonds secured by debtor countries could be utilized by the American treasury is still considered in certain administration circles as a possible framework for making war debt revision "practicable" and "palatable" to the American people.

But it is admitted that any readjustment with Great Britain must proportionately be accorded other debtors.

BRITISH BALK AT TERMS

One prominent spokesman of the administration suggested in the course of informal diplomatic conversations that the administration would favor according Great Britain similar terms accorded the French under the Mellon-Berenger agreement.

THIS IS NOT ACCEPTABLE TO THE BRITISH.

Another agent of the government declared the administration favored cutting the British debt EIGHTY PER CENT.

During the negotiations last November in Washington between British treasury officials and American treasury and state department officials, the question of a final settlement was again taken up.

But again the problem of the inability of the executive to deal with war debts alone and the apparent hostility of Congress held up any "progress."

Great Britain decided to make another token payment, but comment in official circles in London was bitter, and the "token" was reduced this time to $7,500,000, which represents LESS than a ten cents on the dollar settlement.

NICKEL ON DOLLAR TOO MUCH

Europe, nurtured by hopes of revision by spokesmen, authorized or unauthorized to speak the true sentiment of the administration, is impatient and insistent about war debts, and the basis of Europe's proposal for settlement is TEN CENTS ON THE DOLLAR OR LESS.

Inasmuch as one-half of France's debt has already been forgiven her, such a settlement with France would amount to five cents on the original dollar loaned—and France is unwilling to pay THAT.

If such settlements are unsatisfactory to the American Congress and the American people they must be careful how they delegate extraordinary powers to the President regarding tariff adjustments, international fiscal policies and treaty agreements, as these powers are likely to be employed for debt settlements in inextricable combination with other agreements, and the American government, like the dog in Aesop's Fable, will lose the bone while trying to secure an empty shadow.

BEHIND THE LINES OF THE Waldorf
Fresh Apples
365 DAYS A YEAR
WALDORF APPLE PIES HAVE BEEN known for their excellence for years . . . in fact the Waldorf reputation first started with its reputation for fine coffee and apple pies.
● There is a man at the Waldorf bakery in Boston who, more than any one else, is responsible for their fine flavor, and juiciness . . . every day in the year. His name is Herman S. Shurian, and while his job carries the title of Bakery Superintendent he is known far and wide as a master at making apple pies. He seems to be tireless in his efforts to improve his pies . . . experimenting and testing day after day.
● The next time you are having lunch or supper in your favorite Waldorf, order one of those generous servings of juicy apple pie . . . and, if you like it, a piece of cheese. Notice how flaky the pastry is . . . butter pastry it is called. Take your fork and lightly scrape the upper crust, and see how light and thoroughly cooked Shurian's master craftsmanship allows it to be. And, as to taste . . . it is a thing of delight to everyone who likes apple pie.
● It is also interesting to see the big Waldorf staff making these luscious desserts. Each operator is clad in a white uniform, in a spotless big room. Each apple . . . Gravensteins from the middle of August until January, and Baldwins after that . . . is peeled only immediately before being put in the pie. Thus they are fresh and full of Nature's natural juices. After a scientific baking with perfectly controlled heat they are rushed to the Waldorf's in the immediate vicinity.
● Think of it . . . apple pies from fresh apples every day in the year. This is one of Mr. Shurian's specialties.

TAVERN LIQUOR WINS, BUT FEW ASK PERMITS

With liquor in Boston taverns guaranteed by a three to one victory at the polls yesterday the rush of applicants for tavern licenses to the offices of the City Licensing Commission, at 1 Beacon st., failed to materialize this morning. Noon came, and less than a dozen hardy souls had asked for an opportunity to try their hands at the new business.

With strange concoctions, ubiquitously labeled as "blended whiskey," selling at 40 cents the drink, and with cocktails and high-balls, of these same puzzling blends, on the cards at 50 cents, experts say there has been but little of the great Bonanza rush to hotels and package goods stores.

GLAD TO SAVE FEE

Most of them today seemed glad that they were forced to wait until now for the opportunity of opening a tavern. After a chance to study the profit sheets of some of the present liquor dispensaries, they are glad to save the price of a license.

But if there are more optimistic souls in the city, the license board wants them to know that there are plenty of permits available. Authorized to grant 1000 licenses, the board has issued about 325 to date and is holding 25 in reserve for applicants it has turned down, but who may win appeals before the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. The rest of the licenses are available for prospective tavern operators.

100 NOW ON FILE

The board does have on file about 100 applicants for tavern licenses that were made tentaticely a few weeks ago. All of these have been investigated and it is possible that the licenses will be granted so that the places may open for business late in the week. But some of these applicants are not expected to claim the permits.

The license commission is to go into a huddle this afternoon to analyze yesterday's election returns. It was reliably learned that it is planned to respect the voters and to refrain from issuing tavern licenses in precincts that polled a relatively heavy anti-tavern vote.

The vote was Yes, 24,362. No, 7825. At the same time license was accepted 27,690 to 4673, or almost 6 to 1, and beer and wine were favored by a similar ratio, 26,650 to 4479.

FISH WRECK AID BILL VOTED

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—The House fisheries committee approved today a bill to extend to shipwrecked fishing and whaling crews the same assistance provided for seamen of the American Merchant Marine.

The committee voted unanimously to report the bill after hearing from Capt. Archie McLeod of Gloucester, Mass., of hardships endured by his crew of 29 shipwrecked in Canada before assistance and transportation could be obtained.

Representative Andrew of Gloucester, author of the bill, told the committee crews of fishermen and whaling vessels had been excluded from an act of 1898 authorizing American consuls to provide clothing, food, shelter and transportation of American seamen wrecked in foreign ports.

The recent wrecks of three Gloucester schooners illustrated the need for removal of the discrimination against the fishermen, Andrew said.

Traylor Near Death Family at Bedside

Dr. N. Clarke Gilbert, one of five physicians in constant attendance expressed fear the banker was near death.

He was being kept under an oxygen tent.

U.S. MINTS OPEN TO SOVIET GOLD

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—Secretary Morgenthau today opened federal mints to Soviet Russian gold.

It was one of three important orders affecting trade with recently recognized Russia. The other two lifted prohibitions against Russian lumber and pulp wood because of convict labor production and against Russian matches because of dumping.

Quinn Appointment Confirmed in Capital

ashington, Jan. 24—Rep. Healey (D, Mass.) reports he has been informed by the Postoffice Department that the promotion of William J. Quinn from superintendent of the Somerville postoffice to assistant superintendent in charge of mails of the Boston postal district had been confirmed.

California Insists on Bar to Orientals

Washington, Jan. 24—Twenty California representatives, the state's entire congressional delegation, has sent a petition to President Roosevelt setting forth the view that no effort should be made to substitute the quota system for the policy of excluding Orientals from this country.

FREEDOM NEAR FOR U. S. FOUR

Madrid, Jan. 24 (AP)—The attorney general of Spain recommended to the supreme court today a pardon for four Americans held in jail at Palma, Mallorca, for assaulting a civil guard.

The four are Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Lockwood of West Springfield, Mass.; Roger F. Mead of New York and Edmund A. Blodgett of Stamford, Ct.

They have been held in Palma since last Sunday when arrested following a supreme court reversal of a military tribunal verdict. The military court had acquitted them of the charge, but the supreme court found them guilty and sentenced them to six months and a day in jail.

Intercession for their pardon was made directly to the Spanish government by Ambassador Claude G. Bowers of the United States.

McLaughlin Heads P. O. at Roslindale

John J. McLaughlin, Jr., of 9 Regina rd., Dorchester, carrier at the Grove Hall station, was today appointed superintendent of the Roslindale branch of the Boston postoffice, it was announced by Postmaster William E. Hurley. He is a brother of Fire Commissoner Edward F. McLaughlin.

He succeeds Superintendent McDonough, who died recently.

CURLEY FRIENDS TO PACK HALL

If you want to attend the good-will dinner to former Mayor Curley at the Copley Plaza Saturday night, and haven't got your ticket, you will have to stand.

Every seat in the ballroom, boxes and music foyer has been sold, according to Judge Emil E. Fuchs, chairman of the party. Applicants are being told the only space left is the outside foyer where amplifiers will carry the music and speaking.

Judge Fuchs said that after the speaking started, additional chairs and standing room will be made available to guests from the main foyer on the ballroom floor.

BYRD FLAGSHIP GOES ADRIFT

Aboard Admiral Byrd's Flagship, Bay of Whales, Antarctic, Jan. 24—(Via MacKay Radio)—(AP)—An ill wind blew part of the Byrd expedition into idleness today.

Springing up suddenly it drove Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's flagship from her berth along the low shelf of crumbling ice—so that none of those on board could go ashore.

Some took turns at a glass, watching the men marooned on shore laboriously towing supplies on the bay ice, the dog teams hurrying loaded sledges to a transfer depot a mile and a half to the southeast.

Of the 20 on shore, three were in the old winter camp at Little America, the others distributed among empty caches four and a half miles south of the edge of the bay ice and the unloading station at its edge.

The turns at the glass were expected to be replaced by real work again soon. The ship was cruising slowly and all indications pointed to the probability of an early mooring.

STARS FETED AT PRESS FROLIC

More than 1000 couples were in attendance at the Press Frolics of 1934, presented jointly by the Newspaper Guild and the Headline Club of Boston at the Copley-Plaza last night. Governor and Mrs. Ely led the grand march.

Mary Pickford, Lillian Gish and Doris Kenyon, movie stars, were introduced as guests by Governor Ely. The ball committee was headed by Mark McIntyre, chairman; Shannon Cormack, vice-chairman; Thomas F. Grant and William Griffin.

House Starts Work on Fall Fences

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—House Democrats started today on a help-each-other pull toward next fall's campaign in which they hope to hold their heavy majority in the next Congress.

The Democratic congressional campaign committee at a reorganization meeting last night re-elected Rep. Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee to lead the drive for a third time.

Committees were named to drum up the necessary finances, provide speakers and do other work in the campaign. The committee selected Rep. McClintic of Oklahoma, as first vice-chairman and Rep. Crowe of Indiana as second vice-chairman.

5 PERSONS LOST IN BLIZZARD

Winnipeg, Jan. 24 (AP) — Three children lost in a blizzard as they walked home the three miles from school were sought today.

They are Mary, 14; Vernon, 12, and Pauline, 8, daughters and son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stifle of Sunnybrook, Alta.

Mrs. James Morris and her son John, 21, were lost while driving a team between Tessier railway station and their farm home. Friends fear they are dead.

Three provinces, Saskatchewan Alberta and Manitoba, were swept by the storm — the second severe blizzard of the winter.

DICKENS' "DAVID COPPERFIELD" to Be Directed by George Cukor -:- Longer Boston Stay, Cape Cod Trip, in MARY PICKFORD'S NEW PLANS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Jan. 24—What is more cheerful than to be told that George Cukor, who gave us "Little Women," will direct "David Copperfield" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. With George Cukor at the helm we can be sure that the character that Charles Dickens said was in "His Heart of Hearts" will not be caricatured.

David O Selznick, who has been particularly close to Cukor since they were associated in the making of "What Price Hollywood," "Dinner at Eight" and "Bill of Divorcement," will produce this widely read Dickens novel. Young Mr. Selznick has ideas, too, and I must add, his is a great responsibility since "David Copperfield" is a character universally loved by thousands who have read and reread this delightful novel.

The stage will just have to wait for Corinne Griffith. After all, she belongs to the movies and it is written in the cards that a new career awaits her. Radio is elated to be the film company to bring the glamorous Corinne back to the public that has by no means forgotten her. She will be costarred with Otto Kruger in that very thrilling drama, "The Perfect Crime," by Israel Zangwill. Because "The Perfect Crime" was filmed in the before-the-talkies-era you may forget that title and call it "The Crime Doctor." John Robertson, who came back from his ranch just to show some of these newcomers that he is still a topnotcher when it comes to direction, will direct Corinne and her screen vis-a-vis.

A little bird whispers that Lee Tracy is about to be reinstated in the motion picture business. Seems that Mexico isn't half as mad at Lee as some of the columnists have intimated, and that many of his antics have been exaggerated. Lee has let it be known to people in authority in Mexico that he meant no offense. Now, to go on with the story. Louis B. Mayer is not one to hold grudges and he will not stand in Lee Tracy's way if Universal signs him on a contract now being discussed.

Lee Tracy

The very new movie career of Alice Faye, platinum blonde, in Rudy Vallee's stage and screen act, is threatened with a serious interruption. George White and his crew, including Charlie Le Maire, are "headin'" for Broadway to make plans for staging a new George White "Scandals," with Gregory Ratoff and others. Before White left Hollywood he told Miss Faye a special part would be written in the new "Scandals" for her. Naturally, she is interested. BUT—Fox has a previous claim on Miss Faye's services and she is wanted right now for the lead in "Red-Heads."

The flap flap of the stork's wings is expected at the George O'Brien home, according to a well authenticated report. Mrs. O'Brien, who was formerly Marguerite Churchill and a very capable actress, is due to return with her husband from New York tomorrow. While in the East she admitted to several friends that she is buying little garments. The O'Briens were married early last summer and the arrival is scheduled for this coming summer.

The infallible box office reports of "Bring 'Em Back Alive," Frank Buck's natural history screen drama, produced by Clyde E. Elliott, showed this picture to be a money-maker. Elliott has just completed another adventure film, "Devil Tiger," produced in Siam, and now he has been corraled by Fox again to travel to China to make a story with an all-native cast. The famous Yangtze river will be utilized as the background, and they tell me that Professor Elliott has a great dramatic idea.

The busiest man in all Hollywood today was Mr. George Rosenberg (Rosie to You). Rosie has affiliated himself with the Schulberg-Feldman offices and he was calling on the trade today. The Sam Woods are looking forward to a European holiday in June. Sam finishes his present MGM contract this summer and before he starts on a new contract he and Mrs. Woods will take a little vacation. Dorothy Dunbar (Mrs. Max Baer) is one of the girls who will sail aboard the Twentieth Century Special, being sent East as an exploitation stunt. Planes are valuable as timesavers for the movies. Ted Fio Rito flew into town this afternoon. Dashed to the Hollywood Plaza and then to Warner Brothers to shoot scenes in "Hot Air." He flies back tomorrow, having completed his movie job in a mere 24 hours. Joe E. Brown, come what may, will do that long planned circus yarn before he takes a look at the Orient. "Sawdust" is the name of the opera and will be based on an original story by Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmar.

Snapshots of Hollywood:

EMMANUEL COHEN'S dinner dance in honor of the GARY COOPERS a really delightful affair; W. C. FIELDS, in rare form, doing his famous juggling act; BING CROSBY singing and JACK OAKIE doing a few special stunts; a huge cake, with two figures on horseback and a desert background, on exhibition until, bit by bit, it disappeared—it was that good; ALISON SKIPWORTH, the CECIL DE MILLES and just about all the Paramounters wishing the COOPERS happiness; SAM HARRIS showing unexpected skill as a wrestler at FRANK ORSATTI'S spaghetti party; EDGAR ALLAN WOOLF, in whose honor the dinner was given, staging the wrestling show with BOLTON MALLORY as one of the performers; MRS. WILLIAM GARGAN, whose youngsters have whooping cough, playing solitaire by herself; MRS. JACK HALEY not taking any chances on carrying a germ to her new baby; MRS. W. K. HOWARD feeding about 35 guests with special Chinese food, following the christening of CARMEN and JOHN CONSIDINE'S baby; the young lady will be called ERIN VALERIE PATRIAJA.

All-Beethoven Program

Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who has been on vacation for two weeks, returned to direct the third Tuesday matinee of the season. The all-Beethoven program included the fourth and fifth symphonies and the overture to "The Creatures of Prometheus."

The engrossed attention of the audience and the thunderous applause with which it greeted conductor and performers after the performances of the various compositions bore witness to the continuing vitality of Beethoven's scores. They were also a testimonial to the eloquence of Dr. Koussevitzky's presentation of the music, and to the brilliance of orchestral playing.

Big Opening

Opening at Waldron's Casino, the Peek-a-Boo burlesquers proved a hit, Jean Bedini being the star and a particular favorite at this theater. Among the Bedini assistants in a merry melange are Leila Lita, "Nan" Bell.

Southern Type to the Fore

The new show opening at the Park last night revealed burlesque moderne with a slant toward the Dixie touch. This extended even to the chorus, seemingly brought up from below the Mason and Dixon line to add to the gayety of Hub audience. Back of girls and principals were settings carrying out the southern ideas.

Bowery Humor

At the Old Howard, last night the "Bowery Burlesquers" opened with Mike Sacks and Joe Freed as the outstanding comedians. The Lopez Sisters, Tommy Levine, Joy St. Clair, Alba Bradley, Mildred Ross, Alice Kennedy, the Ferdandeez Trio, Harry Cornell and Al Golden, Jr., are featured.

In addition, the Howard has on its vaudeville bill Alene and Evans, equilibrists, and Blomberg's Alaskans.

"End of the World"

"End of the World," Vina Delmar's new story, has been purchased by Paramount for production next fall.

Star Decides to Continue Tour for Some Weeks; Interested in Hub Man's Stage Theme

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Quite definitely life is shuffling (Mary Pickford speaking) a new deal for me. Shakespeare tells of the Divinity that shapes our ends, rough-hew them how he will. Somehow, life is giving me the happiest breaks. I wanted to see Boston again, close-up. And I shall. I have, oh, so long! wanted to breathe the Cape Cod air, with its tang of the sea, and I shall. And ever so many things are opening up for me, even a new career, when I was pretty blue a few weeks ago, leaving Hollywood, with no thought of anything save to get away from happy memories of days gone glimmering, probably lost to me forever.

* * *

For the two-fold purpose of seeing Lillian Gish acting in her new play at the Wilbur (this movie department speaking now) and of doing a bit of sight-seeing, Our Mary has decided to prolong her stay. She finishes at the Metropolitan, tomorrow night; her six shows a day have prevented her from fully enjoying her visit, the routine holding her pretty close to her dressing-room. So on Friday, she told me this morning, she will see just how Boston has changed since her days here in the melodramas of her teens and earlier.

That night she goes to watch friend on stage, and later in films.

On Saturday she will motor down along the Cape, and she is to be the guest of the Fulton Ourslers for a while at Falmouth.

* * *

"And that," she avers, "will be a choice item for me; for I am pretty tired, and that Cape air will do me a world of good."

"And where do we go from here?" this department queried.

"I have decided to lay off a week; that will give me a good rest. I shall go from Falmouth to New York city.

"It's strange. Life is strange. Sad at heart, but a short time ago I left Pickfair. Christmas was coming. For 13 years I had been happy there each Yule week. I just couldn't face it; so I came East. By merest chance, I stepped onto the stage again, and here I am, in up to my ears, and launched on something I never dreamed of.

"That's life for you.

* * *

"God is good. Perhaps sorrow refines the soul and strengthens it. My religion means more to me than ever, and the flood of letters I get, and the many who tell me they love me, almost makes me think a heart break can have its brighter side. I, that was so melancholy, am now filled with a new joy and a new ambition and a rejuvenated outlook on life.

"The cause of it is the kindness of everybody, audiences, newspaper folk and thousands of persons who write me and see me. I do love them all, and they have given me a priceless thing in this renewed courage and strength to go on."

About her tour?

Frank Bruner, her personal representative, is bombarded with requests from key cities, and little places, too, that they want our Mary. Seems as if the whole western world wanted to book her.

"I wish I could give them the chance, and I'd love to meet my friends everywhere," Our Mary says. "But that's physically impossible."

"But I am looking for a good, clean, vigorous play of American life, and if I find it, I'll drop my tour and go onto the legitimate stage," she declares.

She says that George Jean Nathan thinks he has the play for her. Miss Pickford is also interested in a theme from the gifted pen of Edward Dean Sullivan, formerly famous Hollywood writer, an author of note, and (we say this proudly) now a member of the editorial staff of the Boston Evening American.

* * *

Several times I have chatted with our Mary this trip. She smiles when I recall having seen her feeding the pigeons on the Common in earlier days; or the time when her one dress got sopping wet in the Boston rain and good Emma Dunn lent her a dress miles too big for her . . .

Get this. She loves people. Rank and title mean nothing, and there's a thrill for her in the hand of the lowly that she doesn't get out of the coronet. She is just "plain folks," unbelievably shy for all the fame and fortune that are hers.

This writer has interviewed a vast number of women during long newspaper years; he hands the palm to Our Mary.

She is the finest, sweetest, dearest—most "down to earth" of them all.

Hollywood Close-Ups

By JAMES E. MITCHELL

See ZaSu Pitts.

Not that ZaSu has a cow for sale, but she can tell you where to look for one, what to look for, the prices you will be asked and the price you should pay; in short, how to buy a cow.

ZaSu has just bought a cow. Having three acres of land about her home in Brentwood and two children who drink lots of milk, she decided a cow would be a good investment.

She made a few tentative inquiries that got her nowhere and finally inserted a want ad in a newspaper. Immediately she was deluged with replies. It seems there is a considerable spread in the prices of cows.

Cows were quoted to her at from $5 to $500. Some would give six or eight gallons of milk, or, at least, so their owners said, and some practically none at all.

Traveling about, looking at prospects, ZaSu found, too, that cows come in various breeds, colors, sizes and shapes.

She finally found exactly what she wanted in a small Jersey, for which she paid $103 to a rancher a few miles north of her home.

SOCIETY LEADERS WILL ATTEND RALLY AT WELLESLEY COLLEGE

By Betty Alden

THE VINCENT VENTURES, the annual production of the Vincent Club will be produced at the Wilbur Theater on March 22, 23 and 24 . . . Rehearsals under the coaching of Mr. Hall, last year's coach, will begin on February 19 at the Somerset Hotel where daily luncheons will be served to the cast.

Miss Gertrude Peabody will have charge of the sale of tickets for the show this year . . . the tickets to go on sale the last of February.

Well over 5500 books and 5000 magazines were collected the week of the drive for the American Merchant Marine library, under the sponsorship of the Junior League. Mr. Folsom, the dispatch agent at Boston, has the responsibility of sorting the books, and those which are of no use are sold, the money that is received is spent to buy technical works for the men. Pictures in magazines that are too badly torn to be included in the "libraries," are cut out and put into scrap books for children of lighthouse keepers. In this way all is grist that comes to the mill of the American Merchant Marine Library Association. Mrs. Ralph B. Williams, Jr., and her committee are still collecting many books every day.

Plan Dinner Parties Before Ball

MRS. HUGH O'NEILL HENCKEN, of 100 Beacon st., and Mrs. Chandler Hovey, of 258 Hammond st., Chestnut Hill, are among those giving dinner parties before the ball.

Miss Lillian Gish and Miss Doris Kenyon have followed Miss Mary Pickford's lead in autographing tickets for the ball, which may be retained by the recipients. Mr. Al Sheehan, manager of the Colonial and Wilbur theaters, has arranged to have the tickets on sale at the box offices. Miss Kenyon's tickets are being sold in the lobby of the Keith Boston Theater, where she is appearing this week.

Another ball for the same purpose of endowing the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, so that the large number of needy infantile paralysis cases can be treated, will be held at the Hotel Bradford under the sponsorship of the Boston Central Labor Union. Nearly 75 per cent of the patients now at the foundation are unable to pay even the actual cost of their treatment, and a number of these are unable to pay anything.

Tickets may be secured at the Statler Hotel, Hotel Touraine, Parker House, Copley-Plaza, Hotel Continental, Herrick's and at the Junior League.

SO, they have made another ruling to take effect at once that the age limit is to be continued until forty.

Mary Pickford Says Talkies Will Justify Their Existence

By Mary Pickford

Before I leave Boston, I want to state adequately my viewpoint on the talkies.

Brought up, as it were, in the days of the silent pictures, I was reluctant to accept the talkies. However, after six years, I believe the talkies, if given a similar period of experimentation—the 25 years of development through which the silents progressed—the sound movies will more than justify their existence.

PUBLIC DEMANDS SEX

That is, if television doesn't kill them. No matter what happens, pictures will never die out, I believe. Motion picture entertainment is with us to stay. It is the mass entertainment; it has universal appeal. It is the best show for the least amount of money. It was designed for the pocketbook of the majority of the people, and it is on such a basis that I conclude it can never be replaced.

Of course the industry has been spanked several times, and rightly so. But if the industry has overstepped the bounds of propriety in some instances, it has been because of the producers' desire to please the public. It is not the industry's fault that so many gangster and sex pictures have made their way into the movie houses. The public asked for it, and the producers answered the request.

MOURNS FOR SILENTS

As I review the days of the silents, I wish there could be some way to find ourselves returning to the days of the silents, when individual interpretation could find mental exercise in understanding a screen play; when so much sound and stupid dialogue couldn't be thrown from the cinema to the audience; when the audience could sit back and view a film and place its own construction on dramatic sequences

When you stop to think about it, laughing and crying are the only two universal common bonds. All else is different—language, customs yes even interpretation.

There is something mystical, enchanting about the Egyptian and the Indian insignia of the moon and the sun. We gaze upon it as human beings and we behold a wonder of the universe and we view it as our mood moves us. That was underlying principle of the silents. They stirred our imagination. We could fill in the gaps.

But in the talkies there is nothing left to the spectator's imagination. After all, entertainment is an emotional exercise. It is necessary and if we are to derive benefit from it we, as audience, must be allowed to place our own mental construction upon ti.

TALKIES IN SLUMP

The sound pictures might have made great strides if the depression had not curtailed their production cost and forced producers to seek turn-overs and volume business. That is all that the picture business is—a factory where illusions are created, based on the thin threads of art—inspiration.

Any Home Pleases This Pigeon

Two weeks of loafing in the YD Garage in Newbury st., Back Bay, ended today for "Lazy," a footloose—or maybe a wingloose—carrier pigeon, for "Lazy" was substracted from the garage today by police and given to care of the Animal Rescue League.

The pigeon, carrying a tag marked "Hub 313, Aug. '33," dropped in at the garage a couple of weeks ago and since had refused to leave, despite attempts of employes to start him on his way again.

Today they notified police and the bird was transferred to await the claim of his owner.

Fletcher, Charles B. Floyd, Harlan P. Kelsey, Ralph Lawson, Dr. John B. May, Harry R. Sinclair, Dr. Charles W. Townsend, George C. Warren, directors of the Massachusetts Audubon Society are sponsoring a series of three bird lectures to take place during the month of February in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler.

Saturday afternoon, February 3, at 2:30 has been scheduled for the first of these lectures, entitled "Monarchs of the Air." Capt. C. W. R. Knight, ranked as one of the leading bird photographers of the world, whose films, especially of eagles have been presented, not only in America, but in England, Europe and South Africa, will be the first lecturer.

A combination of superb photography of superb birds, a beautiful pageant of falconry in the days of Henry VIII (in full costume) a burlesque movie thriller of birds and people with magnificent "King's Falcon," the European Golden Eagle, as the hero, and finally wonderful pictures of the trained bald eagle, Miss America, and the trained golden eagle, Mr. Ramshaw, in free flight will be among the scenes of interest.

This Is Life

—By Robert E. Rogers—

FOR ONCE I am able to mention a book on the day on which it is published. I am glad to be able to do it because this time it happens to be the new novel by Sinclair Lewis, whom many Americans consider our most important novelist. It is called "Work of Art," and is published by Doubleday Doran.

Notwithstanding Mr. Lewis having been awarded the Nobel Prize, even his friends have admitted of late that he has been slipping. "Elmer Gantry" created considerable unfavorable comment. "Dodsworth" was greeted with apathy. And in spite of its immediate filming as a talkie, "Anne Vickers" was only a 50-50 success.

It is pleasant, therefore, to be able to say sincerely that in "Work of Art" Mr. Lewis is working in the medium of his first success. Not as fine, perhaps, as Babbitt or Arrowsmith, because the theme is more limited, but truly in their genre. A man's novel, this time, not an abortive attempt to manufacture a synthetic woman radical and social reformer full of sex freedom. It is not too late to say that Lewis has uniformly been unfortunate with his women characters—all except the rowdy little nurse, Leora, Arrowsmith's wife, who died so tragically of fever in the West Indies. The rest are all ambitious rag dolls who didn't quite jell—if you will forgive the trope.

* * *

Story of Brothers

"WORK OF ART" is a story about two brothers, the one a semi-drunken "jitney genius" with delusions of grandeur and a capacity for making considerable money in various ignoble literary ways. He is the son of the boozed keeper of a fourth rate Connecticut hotel, where he loafs on the job and his elder brother does all the work. Ora, the Greenwich Village bright light who has ambitions for the Algonquin, doesn't matter. He is not the hero. His brother, Myron Weagle, is. He is the artist. And his work of art is the perfect hotel.

From boyhood, from the time a friendly drummer hymns him the splendor of the perfect hotel keeper, the art becomes his passion. He learns it, not by correspondence, not at Cornell, but by apprenticeship. First in various holes and corners in Connecticut, then in an enormous shack at the St. Louis Fair, then in a bankrupt resort house in Florida, where he attracts the attention of one of the great men of the craft.

He climbs to the top of his profession, managing what surely must have been the old Waldorf in New York. On the death of his friend and patron he is chiselled out of control and sets about building the perfect hotel for himself. He builds it, but accident and prohibition and some rascally partners, who want not a perfect hotel but a road-house, let him down once more. But he will not give up.

* * *

The Real Artist

HIS BROTHER, now gone Hollywood, has one last glimpse of Myron managing a little commercial house in the Middle West and planning the perfect auto tourist camp —this time with his young son as aid and encouragement. For Myron is like Arrowsmith. In spite of the American that prefers the flashy and the stereotyped to the truthful and the honest, he is going to stick to his ideal to the end. He is the real artist, not Ora in the Village and in Hollywood. He is the kind of American Sinclair Lewis admires.

No meager recounting of the fable can ever give you any sense of the richness of the color that Lewis brushes into his canvas, brushes with such energy and gusto and humor and philosophical flavor. There are no women, thank Heaven, except a sketchy mother and an even more sketchy wife and a few transients. But even the least of the men are alive and American—the old style drummer J. Hector Warlock, whose business goes back on him, the old hotel magnate Mark Elphinstone, whose heart goes back on him, and an assorted bunch of clerks, cooks, waiters, bar-keepers, managers and the like, the least of whom are momentarily alive and kicking as Lewis characters were wont to kick in the old days. Ora the literateur must be a kind of composite picture of all the fifth-rate writing men Lewis ever knew when he went with the Macdougall street crowd.

Disappointed Idealist

ON MYRON, Lewis has lavished all the pent-up, savage, ironic affection that this disappointed idealist has for the real thing. No better picture of what it means to be an apprentice, a professional, an amateur, and an artist all in one exists in our modern literature. Curiously enough Arnold Bennett's last novel was about a man with a passion for running the perfect hotel. "Imperial Hotel" is a fine, honest, passionate novel, full of the same kind of magnificent detail that Lewis is so adept at. But read both in quick succession, and I think you will say that Lewis' story is the more natural, the more probable, the more genuine, free from that spurious romanticism both Balzac and Bennett could not deny themselves.

Lewis has caught the truth that from any institution carefully studied over a period of time may be learned the secret of a civilization influx. In this book one sees an American that was careless and sloppy and uncouth and honest becoming grand and expensive and imitative and mechanized, and, finally, a graft, a racket and utterly spurious. At the end Myron is trying to save the auto camp from standardization and cinema ideals. Lewis knows that he will fail, but he admires him a lot for trying—just as he admired Arrowsmith.

If you have gone sour on Sinclair Lewis of late, this novel will restore your faith in him. I hope it is put on the required reading list of Cornell's school of hotel keeping. It ought to lie cheek-by-jowl with the Gideon Bible in every hotel room. It ought to be the vade-mecum of the Traveling Men's Association. Then our hotels might be less like hippodromes and more like homes.

Living Through History

—By Aldous Huxley—

LONDON—On the night of the armistice, in 1918, I was dining, as it happened, with a middle-aged schoolmaster. He was a man of placid temperament and fixed habits, which the convulsions of the time had hardly disturbed. There was a silence over the dessert, a silence from which my friend at last emerged with a remark I have never forgotten. "I find it very hard," he said, pensively, "to realize that I've just finished living through one of the most important events in history."

His case was typical. Epoch-making things can happen, and the overwhelming majority of contemporaries be unaware of them. Here is an insignificant personal example of the way in which history can pass one by. I happened to be in Spain at the time of the recent elections. Most of the polling day I spent walking about the streets of Madrid and thinking as I did so, what very well-behaved people the Spaniards were. There was a bit of sporadic shouting and here and there a small and, so far as my experience went, always good-natured crowd. And that was all. Two days later I bought an English paper and read, on the front page and in large type, that the Spanish elections had been accompanied by so much bloodshed that the government was seriously thinking of proclaiming martial law. Fooled again! I had missed it all.

* * *

HAD the English paper been lying? Not exactly; it had just been making the best of the truth. That bloodshed, when you looked into the matter, boiled down to perhaps a score of casualties. Now, if twenty people are killed or wounded out of a total population of twenty millions, it is obvious that the chances against any one spectator witnessing a scene of bloodshed will be very high—several hundreds of thousands to one. The blood may be shed; but most people will be like my friend the schoolmaster, unaware that anything unusual is happening.

And this is not all. During any period of disturbance, even those who do know what is happening will not be in a position to realize the historical bearing of events. The past, when we read about it in the history books, always seems to have been wonderfully dramatic and significant. The present, as we know it by direct experience, is devoid of any such grandiose inner meaning.

THE truth is, of course, that when the past was the present, existence seemed to the individual just as flatly without historical significance as it does to us now. At any given moment "the past" is simply a product of the imagination of living men and women; it exists as a part of the ideal present. Our "past" bears almost no resemblance to the present actually lived through by the historical personages of whom we read.

And this, precisely, is why history can't teach us such valuable lessons. It is the function of imagination to provide ideal correctives to reality. History is an imaginative construction based upon documents and, being imaginative, can offer admirably penetrating criticisms of life. If "the past" were not imaginary, but were the same as the present actually experienced by historical characters, it could provide no such criticism. All good history is written so as to seem dramatic and significant. This is as it should be. But let us not forget that, for most of the people who lived in the past, existence was not dramatic and that, for practically all, it was historically insignificant.

Reading and Writing

—By William Soskin—

WHEN our most prominent writers let down their hair and relax the results are entertaining. Eugene O'Neill puts aside his masks and his dual personalities for the moment and gives us a nostalgic little comedy about his New England youth, about the good front parlor virtues and the special softness of the moon that glows over one's home town.

Sinclair Lewis relaxes and we have, surprisingly enough, something of a Horatio Alger story, a tale of the local boy who makes good—with important, satirical reservations. "Work of Art" is the title of the Nobel Prize novelist's latest story. He is not particularly concerned with his hero's success as such, though Myron Weagle's career takes him to the gaudiest heights of one of the most gaudy of American professions—hotel-keeping. And hotels are beautiful, conveniently dramatized little worlds of men and things.

SMALL town American hotels on Main street with leather chairs in a row and brass cuspidors and an old-fashioned register . . . Stuffy, respectable family hotels with all the chintz and the dreary manners of shabby gentility . . . Mellow hotels with traditions of drinking and of fastidious gastronomic arts, whose presidential suites and grand ballrooms now contain only memories of the glittering Edwardian splendors . . . Great, modern, Babylonian institutions which are miracles of lavish efficiency and where the human being's slightest wants or impulses are pampered with almost indecent solicitude . . . These are a few of the many panels which make up the allegory of professional hostelry in "Work of Art."

And Sinclair Lewis has a swell time with his story, whether he is putting his hero through the paces of potato-peeling and ice-water toting, or initiating him into the mysteries of organizations involved in plying a thousand diners with chicken and green peas while silent waiters bow and scrape and discreet musicians soothe the nerves.

* * *

To a Place of Comfort

OTHER writers have succumbed to the lure of the hotel in their day.

One of Arnold Bennett's last novels simply wallowed in the luxuries of the inn and concerned itself almost exclusively with the machinery back of such institutions as the Savoy in London, the Crillon or the great New York hotels. But whereas Arnold Bennett's natural delight in French sauces, English roasts and smooth service made him content merely to describe the hotel in pleasant accents, Sinclair Lewis has a certain rugged simplicity, a wholesome American distaste for softness which makes him turn, eventually, from the towering structure of luxury which is the American hotel system. His hero has his day. He knows the last word in the sensuousness of the hotel, but he returns to a small, solid inn not unlike the American house in which he started as a small boy. He is through with Sauce Bearnaise. Back to roast beef and baked potatoes and clean comfort!

Before Myron completes this circuit, however, Mr. Lewis takes us on as complete a tourist's cruise in the kitchens, bedrooms, lobbies, offices and dining halls of the hotels as anyone could wish.

Just as "Arrowsmith" gave the reader a peculiarly intimate and actual sense of the professional scientist's world, "Work of Art" creates a hotel scene which reaches into the American past and includes a vivid section of the complex American present.

* * *

Away With the "Arty"

WHY the title, "Work of Art"? The obvious reason lies in Myron's dream of the perfect hotel, an artistic vision that moves him just as surely as some elusive and constantly changing ideal motivates the work of a painter or a writer. Indeed, a good deal of the satirical stuff and the bitter comment on various Babbittries and respectable hypocrisies which are an essential part of any Sinclair Lewis novel are directed, in this instance, against the vague "arty" artists, the professional aesthetes who function without benefit of the specific training and knowledge that go into the creation of so authentic a work of art as a good hotel.

"What is an art, what is a profession, what is a business, what is a job?" Myron writes in his book of Hotel Project Notes. "Is a man who runs a great grocery store like Park & Tilford, Acker, Charles, or the gr. dept. of Macy's just a business man, while anybody who makes smart pictures of girls is an artist?"

There doesn't seem to be much point in comparing "Work of Art" with Sinclair Lewis' previous works. It is too informal a story for that. Its writing is by no means distinguished in a literary sense, but it has good utilitarian feeling about it.

Looking at Life

—By Adela Rogers St. Johns—

REPORTED missing from his home for almost a week, an aviator returned and said he had been visiting up state. A noted Wall Street gentleman, also among the missing, had also been visiting friends.

Now I haven't an objection in the world to folks visiting their friends. However, it does seem that gentlemen going off to visit friends might use the telephone, the telegraph or the United States mail, all ready and willing, and let their families know about it, thereby saving considerable mental anguish and some dough for the State and county. It costs money to start finding missing persons who have just been visiting friends.

DR. COLE DAVIS, psychiatrist, advocates the destruction of the incurably insane and "congenital idiots who threaten to swamp the human race."

The idea probably has its points. The difficulty seems to be in the method of procedure. There are at present 400,000 people now confined to insane asylums in the United States. But if there aren't more than 400,000 congenital idiots running around loose I'm a Chinese begonia. I've even known a couple of psychiatrists that I didn't think were right bright.

Who is going to elect the specific candidates for destruction, that's what I want to know.

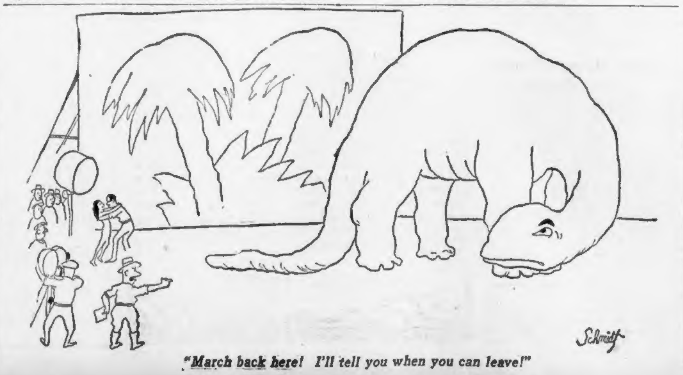
A YOUNG pilot who crashed his plane, killing three passengers, was found guilty of having flown over a populated area at too low an altitude to permit him to make a safe forced landing and of having made unnecessary maneuvers and was given the maximum penalty by the aeronautical division of the United States Department of Commerce: his limited commercial pilot's license was revoked and he was fined $500.

If that's the maximum penalty for breaking air laws which resulted in the death of three people it's not enough. Not by quite a long way. It has been plain for some time that the maximum penalty for dangerous flying by young and comparatively inexperienced pilots wasn't enough. Boys who think they're smart and get at the controls of an airplane and kill people ought to be given a good, stiff lesson—not simply grounded and fined a few hundred dollars.

If aviation is to occupy its rightful place in a civilized world, pilots who are careless of human life and who think flying a plane is a stunt, should be smacked down severely and punished as would be any other citizen who through carelessness took human life.



"March back here! I'll tell you when you can leave!"

A Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

SOMEWHERE, in one of his essays, Robert Cortes Holliday says something about what people miss who do not know and speak to scrubwomen. They are a delightful lot, full of knowledge, and one can learn much from them. He has also dilated on the joys of knowing, personally, members of the police force in any great city. He formed once an acquaintance with a London bobby, and he tells of it with great gusto.

I have not been so fortunate as to know a scrubwoman, but I have more than a bowing acquaintance with more than one policeman in New York. They are a fine lot of fellows. They get to know, by sight, all those of us who dwell in their particular neighborhood. For example, the officer at my corner surprised me by telling me the other day where I had been the evening before.

I was amazed. And I must have shown my amazement. He smiled as only a bright Irish face can smile "Don't worry," he said. "You see, Dick Hosper, who drives a taxi, is my brother-in-law, and he always tells me where he takes you. Gee! you do get around a lot," he added. "You went to the opera the other night, didn't you, and you took a beautiful dame."

I was greatly relieved. Now, if I were going to some disreputable address I would be careful to choose a taxi-driver from another rank. Yet I could not help thinking, if ever I wished to prove an alibi, how useful Frank, the policeman, would become in my life. A useful friend to have.

* * *

THERE is another smiling officer on a corner of Park avenue who is likewise a speaking acquaintance. I was stalled on the little agate island in the center of the street, having done a little jay walking, which used to be against a city ordinance.

The sleek, shining motors, looking like nothing so much as a long battalion of black beetles, were thundering down the street. Not only chauffeurs but ladies with cigarettes drooping from their lips were rushing by, and it seemed to me, as it does to every mere pedestrian, that the signals would never change.

"It doesn't look much like depression, does it?"

"No," he answered. "Most of them are all right—pretty fortunate, I guess. They must be hoarding. Bet they've got cash in their safe deposit boxes."

I was a little astonished at his perspicacity, but I felt he knew what he was talking about, keen observer that he was.

"Say," he went on, "one of these rich dames reduced the wages of her chauffeur last month. He's a friend of mine, and he told me how she came to him and said she could only keep him on if he'd take two dollars and a half less a month! Think of that! Well, he had to stand for it, because he's got a wife and two kids. But gee! he was sore when, the next morning, he was given a new expensive car to drive instead of the old one. And the lady was giving a party that night at one of the big hotels, and Jake—that's the chauffeur's name—was told to take two cases of champagne down town out of their well supplied cellar. She was entertaining twenty people. Now, that ain't fair, is it?"

* * *

JUST then the lights changed and my officer, because a bus whirled around to the right at that instant, saw that I got safely across.

I went on my way, wondering about the psychology of that lady. Here was a bit of information that I had got at first hand and it spoiled my beautiful Winter afternoon. Are there still people in the world like that? I wondered. Yes, there must be. The evidence was only too clear. But what nerve it must have taken for that lady to reduce her chauffeur's wages! She did not see, and she never would see, how the world is changing; how, unless we divide what we have, there will never be any peace on earth, never any readjustment worth while unless it is brought about by different and more unpleasant means. How long will her kind last?

That traffic policemen knew more than she will ever know.

NAPLES.—Am saying "Addio a bella Napoli" today with much joy. I came down principally to meet some friends from New York who are passing through on their way to Egypt but, incidentally, to enjoy a couple of days of sunshine and gay life. Long before the days of Rome people came to Naples for the sunshine. This town seems to have made a special contract with Nature. But, for the past week, the contract has been broken. The cold, stormy, rainy, gloomy weather that has afflicted all Europe has cast its pall over Naples. There is no sunshine. And all gayety has vanished from Neapolitan life.

Vesuvius has disappeared from the horizon. The islands which usually stand out so clearly in the harbor are hidden by a wall of fog. Close to the shore you can see the fishermen in their little boats, holding up umbrellas. The streets are deserted. The gay life is all wet. Everybody is indoors, talking about the weather. They actually feel hurt about it. And I can't get away fast enough.

* * *

Return of the Despaired

WATCHED the Rex come in from New York. A beautiful, graceful ship. She lands here alongside a long, low quay which gives you a better opportunity to take in the entirety of a ship than do our New York docks. You can see her turn around in the harbor and back in, stern first, to her berth. Through the lowest row of portholes sailors and kitchen workers stuck their heads, like the darkey behind the canvas at a country fair. If I'd had some soft balls I would have been tempted to try my skill.

And were those on shore glad to meet their friends! In the matter of emotions the Italians are demonstrative, but, of all Italians, the Neapolitans and Sicilians cast all restraint to the wind and let their feelings loose. Never saw so much frantic hugging, kissing and joyful gesticulating before in my life.

High-Priced Words

ON the way to the station this afternoon I'm going to run up to Posilipo and make my obeissance before the tomb of Virgil. But there are still three hours to kill. Rene started back to Rome with the car this morning—I'll be hanged if I motor in this weather—and took most of the baggage with him. Mrs. was smart and held out a "detective" which she's reading. The rain is splashing against the windows. Mrs. hates to talk when she's reading a thriller and the only book I've got with me is Funk & Wagnalls College Standard Dictionary. Ah, well, it's better than nothing and maybe I'll learn something. So I dug into the dictionary.

"Dawt." From the Scotch, meaning to caress, fondle. That's a good word. "I would like to dawt a seidel of real Pilsner beer."

"Diaulos." A musical instrument composed of two flutes joined at the mouthpiece. Not so good. One flute is bad enough. Maybe it's an abbreviation of die-all-of-us. "A man who plays on the diaulos has an awful gaulos."

"Embrace." A clasping in the arms, a hug. There's a word with many delightful possibilities, but, of course, it entirely depends.

"Empressment." Animated earnestness; demonstrated cordiality. "He kicked the bond salesman down the stairs with great empressment."

"Mandean." A member of an ancient sect of Gnostics, still existing in Mesopotamia, who combine Judaism, Mohammedanism and Christianity with the ancient Babylonian worship. That's a hot idea! But I'll bet they've got a prejudice against the Buddhists.

Anyway, I'm learning too much and getting bored.

* * *

Here's One for Deeves

LOOKED through my pockets—the ultima thule of boredom. Found a letter which I'd been carrying around for a week, from William Deeves of New York. He wants me to make a correction. Well, let's see.

Bruno Lessing wrote (apropos of martyrs): "Centuries after their death the Catholic Church bestowed the title of 'saint' upon them through the process of canonization. And now each has his or her special day to be worshipped."

William Deeves wrote: "I'm confident that this was merely a slip on your part. Catholics, you know, worship only one God. When an opportunity presents itself please correct this statement."

Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls wrote: "Worship—To treat with distinguished or exaggerated admiration or affection. The act or feeling of adoration or homage; the paying of religious reverence, as in prayer, praise, etc. Excessive or ardent admiration."

* * *

THE telephone rang. The porter said he was sending up for the remaining bags. I said "Okay," pressed down the book and went on, "Hello, Alice! When did you get to Naples? Five o'clock train? I'm taking that train, too. We'll have a great chat."

Mrs. looked up quickly from her book and said, "Who's that?" And I said, "Excuse me, but you're busy reading."

Tomorrow:

"ULYSSES" makes its legal appearance and William Soskin comments upon it.

There's always something new in what Robert E. Rogers, our professor, has to say.

No sooner does he get back to Rome than Bruno Lessing starts something on the one subject you can always start something on: women.

CITE ROOSEVELT STAND AGAINST DEATH CHAIR

President Roosevelt does not favor capital punishment, but in his opinion it is a matter for legislative rather than executive action, according to a letter from Miss Margaret A. Lehand, his private secretary, introduced this afternoon at a legislative hearing by opponents of capital punishment.

The President made his statement at a press conference several months ago, said the letter received by Mrs. Herbert B. Ehrmann of Brookline.

The Waltham carbarn bandit case, and the Henry Clay Bull case, which is still pending before Governor Ely, figured prominently in arguments.

The bill seeks to give the jury the right to say whether death or life imprisonment shall be meted out to persons convicted of murder.

THREE PROPOSALS UP

In all, three matters affecting the death penalty were opened for discussion. One was the recommendation from Governor Ely, that capital punishment be limited to convictions for first degree murder which are based upon evidence of a plan, distinctive from deliberate premeditation, as now defined by the courts or in the commission of armed robbery.

The second was a bill filed by Rep. John J. Concannon of Boston, that first degree murder be punished by death or life imprisonment with the jury deciding the punishment. The third was the petition of the Massachusetts Council for the Abolition of the Death Penalty. This bill would substitute life imprisonment for the death penalty.

Speaking about interpretation of the idea of premeditation in murder cases, Herbert Parsons, former probation commissioner, said that sometimes such interpretation is carried to a microscopic extent. On the other hand, he said, there have been instances where women have deliberately murdered their illegitimate children and have not suffered the death penalty. Only recently, he added, a district attorney not noted for his sentimentalism nolle prossed a case of this kind.

If capital punishment were abolished, he said, and it developed there was an increase of killings, he would favor restoration of the death penalty.

Charles A. Rome, assistant United States district attorney, argued the deterring effect of capital punishment is slight as evidenced by the number of armed robberies committed.

Other speakers claimed that the ends of justice might have been met in the Waltham murder case by sending two of the defendants to prison for life.

U. S. Dec. Liquor Imports $10,887,825

Washington, Jan. 24 (AP)—Imports of liquor into the United States in December were shown by Department of Commerce figures today to have jumped 11 times over November.

The December total was $10,887,825, compared with $888,129 the previous month.

CHARLES DEVENS JOSEPH W. POWELL

Charlie Devens, idol of both Beacon Hill and Harvard, is all set for the American League pennant grind after going under the knife for an appendix operation at the Cory Hill Hospital, Brookline. Bothered by the balky appendix all last season, Devens claimed that his wildness on the mound was due to the pain he suffered. Now it's missing and he's all set to burn up the league. Here he is telling his plans to Joseph W. Powell, Princeton squash player whose leg was injured in the recent tourney here. (Boston American photo.)

PUPILS GUARDED FROM SUSPECT

A Cambridge school was being closely watched by police today as the result of an attempt by a man to entice a young girl pupil away.

The Russell school, in the exclusive Larch rd. section in the upper part of the city, was the object of close attention by authorities as the result of a report made of the man's activities.

The girl, eight years old, whose name is being withheld by the Boston Evening American, was accosted by the man in Lakeview ave.

According to the story told police by the child's parents, the man asked the girl to go with him. It is believed he had an automobile nearby.

The man was described as being between 40 and 45 years of age, wearing a yellow jacket, dark trousers and a cap.

GEN. COLE, YD HERO, LAUDS WAR PHOTOS

Lauding the Hearst-Floyd Gibbons collection of uncensored World War pictures appearing in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, as a momentous contribution to civilization, Gen. Charles C. Cole, senior surviving officer of the Yankee Division today expressed the wish that it might be possible to send these pictures to every mother and to every youth in Japan.

Gen. Cole, a trustee for the Boston Elevated and who was decorated for his courage on the blood-soaked battle-field of Northern France, declared that these pictures, besides being the finest ever published in America, were serving the cause of humanity.

TEAR GLAMOUR FROM WAR

"The first instalment of the Floyd Gibbons pictures, published last Sunday tear more of the tinsel and glamour from war than ten thousand pages of printed words," declared Gen. Cole.

"They show the stark horror of war as it actually is and as I have never seen it shown before.

"Japan knows little of war, yet the Japanese are threatening the peace of the world. The mothers and the youth of Japan should see these pictures. They would know, then, that the glory of personal combat—the thrill that in olden days came to men when they fought their common enemies hand to hand—is all gone from war as we saw it in France, and as these Gibbons pictures so vividly portray.

"It is comparatively easy to face an enemy in the open and battle him hand to hand. But the Boston Sunday Advertiser pictures show that this method of combat has gone forever.

"Russia, the other storm center in our country, today, knows all the horrors of present day war. The part they took in the World War is still fresh in their memories. If Mr. Hearst could send these pictures into every Japanese home, the world would breathe easier. A study of these pictures is an education in the methods of modern warfare. The Sunday Advertiser is to be congratulated on having secured this Gibbons collection."

RECALL OLD SCENES

Equally enthusiastic about the Hearst-Gibbons pictures was another veteran of the 26th Division, Brig.-Gen. John H. Agnew, adjutant general of the State of Massachusetts.

"These pictures bring back to me, more forcibly than anything I have ever seen, the scenes we of the Yankee Division, had before us at the front. The pictures are the finest I have seen.

"I sincerely trust they will fulfil one mission—I hope they will lead our nation into that frame of mind where it will never again depend on untrained boys to go into the trenches. I am against war—but if we have a war I want our boys in shape to fight."

Five full pages of these remarkable pictures appeared in last Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. The same number of pages will appear next Sunday and on succeeding Sundays.

'That's Where the Flag Will Be, Eddie—'

EDDIE COLLINS TOM YAWKEY

Owner Tom Yawkey, making his first trip of the season here, surveys his charred baseball estate at Fenway Park in company with manager Eddie Collins. Yawkey points to the spot where he expects to see tht World Series pennant floating

'FIRST DIVISION O. K.'—YAWKEY

"We hope to win the flag, certainly," said Red Sox Owner Tom Yawkey at Fenway Park today. "But I'll be perfectly satisfied if the club winds up in the first division.

"This is as much as I can expect from the club, with a new manager, and a lot of new players who have never played together before.

"The park looks great. Engineers tell me they'll have the place finished in plenty of time for the opener. All in all, I'm entirely satisfied with the way things are going with the Red Sox for 1934."

Owner Yawkey spent several hours with Manager Eddie Collins going over the big Fenway plant, Collins pointed out where the big fire had been several weeks ago. All traces of the $250,000 blaze had practically disappeared.

Yawkey intends to remain in town for another day or so.

"Not to talk baseball," he said. "We're all through buying and trading for this year. We've got baseball stock enough on hand to land in the .500 class, and that makes a nice little start," he grinned.

Yawkey plans to make a few minor changes in the park, and for that reason he will confer with his engineering forces tomorrow.

College Eve's Worst Fear Unpopularity

This was disclosed by a psychological examination.

Other "chief fears" were suspicious looking men, dark streets, mice, snakes, spiders, living too long, and what happens after death.

Two Indicted in Worcester Deaths

Worcester, Jan. 24—Two men, charged with being wife murderers, were included among the persons named in 26 indictments returned by the grand jury here yesterday. There were 21 secret indictments.

Edward A. Cote of Worcester was indicted for the fatal shooting of his wife last Nov. 23, and Patrick Doyle of Clinton was alleged to have slain his wife by stabbing her last Dec. 2.

'Four Aces and Joker' Form New Bridge System

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—A new contract bridge system, which they describe as superior to Sims and Culbertson, has been devised by five experts who are out to win every major event and who already have won many.

The system uses no artifical conventions and it lacks a name. The team is called "The Four Aces and a Joker." David Burnstine, Michael Gottlieb, Oswald Jacoby and Howard Schenken are the members with Richard L. Frey the Joker." With these players in developing the system has been associated Waldemar Von Zedtwitz.

Jacoby today described some features of the system. Having played frequently as partners and opponents of Ely Culbertson and P. Hal Sims, these experts have discarded a fundamental of each in opening the bidding.

Vulnerable or not vulnerable, their standard for opening the bidding is the same in any position, in the main. The Jacoby group permits a pass of a one over one bid if the one over one bidder has passed at the first opportunity to bid.

This permission protects the exception to uniform position bidding.

If first hand, having passed and having a good suit, foresees game possibilities after third hand has opened the bidding and wishes to make third hand bid again, he uses a two over one bid. Third hand never has to make weak openings to protect strong passes in first position.

Opening one no trumps are strong in any position, but deny a rock crusher. A hand containing three aces and a jack but lacking a good suit will not be passed in any position. It is not strong enough for one no trump. It is likely to be opened with a bid of one on a three-card minor.

MRS. PIGEON TO SEEK OFFICE

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pigeon, of East Boston, who recently ended her service with the Boston school committee, has announced her intention to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for the office of State Auditor.

In her formal announcement of her candidacy she stated:

"My name has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Republican nomination for State auditor. I am a candidate for this office.

"If those responsible for the nomination of the Republican candidates believe it would help the party to nominate me, I should feel greatly honored by such a decision. If nominated, I will devote myself conscientiously to the duties imposed and do everything in my power to assure the success of the entire Republican ticket."

O'CONNELL ACTS IN MILK ROW

Called to settle the question of who shall have control of the New England milk industry, as applied to Massachusetts, a meeting has been called in Washington for the last of the month when government officials will confer with all State commissioners.

The delegates to the meeting will be headed by P. A. O'Connell, commissioner for Massachusetts of the National Emergency Council.

O'Connell, according to recent announcements here, will take over control of NRA, AAA, and other federal emergency organizations next Feb. 1. In disclosing the coming meeting, O'Connell said he had requested the AAA to continue their Boston office until the milk control matter had been settled.

'And for Senator—Ha, Ha!'

Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell has been nominated for the United States Senate! The Crimson did it. But Dr. Lowell's secretary thinks it's a whale of a joke. She laughed and laughed. What Dr. Lowell thought about it nobody knows—for publication—for he "never talks to the newspaper boys." You see the Senate "nominee" here in two poses—as Harvard's president emeritus and as a banqueter. (Boston American Photo.)

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass	Pass
2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass (1)	Pass
3 ♡ (2)	Double (3)	Pass	Pass
Pass

(1) Of course, North was quite correct in refusing to double West's bid of two spades. His hand is practically trickless aside from his prospect of spade tricks if that suit is trump, and even though his partner has opened the bidding there is no assurance that West's contract can be defeated.

(2) This bid is rather daring. Obviously South has a losing spade, a losing diamond, possibly a loser in hearts and probably two losing clubs. The number of losers in the club suit may be even greater.

(3) West, by this Double, took no risk of his opponents making a game they would not otherwise make as, with their part-score they had already contracted for game. With his four trumps and the practical certainty of three tricks in other suits, with the possibility of four—the Double was not such a bad gamble.

West's Opening lead was the spade King. The five was played from Dummy, East played the eight, and South of course dropped the singleton Queen. West was in no position to continue the lead of the spade suit, and eventually decided that the lead of a small trump was the best of a choice of evils. The seven was played from Dummy, and when East played the four, the Declarer was agreeably surprised as it afforded him an extra entry to the Dummy. From the drop of the spade 8, South reasoned that East could not have more than two spades and should he hold not more than two trumps the spades in Dummy might be set up and afford discards of losers in the South hand.

Basing the play of the hand after this possibility, the knave of spades was led from dummy and when the 10 dropped from the East hand, South discarded a losing club rather than trump. West, of course, won, but realized that there remained only one chance to defeat the contract and that was that the club king was with East, so, at this point, he played the ace of clubs and followed with a small club. This trick South won with the king and returned a trump to the king in dummy. His remaining losers were then discarded on the established spades and his contract fulfilled with an overtrick.

This stunning ensemble holds two of the season's fashion highlights—a cape and bow! Isn't it a dashing affair, with the perky cape and bow fashioned of a bright plaid to contrast with the monotone of the frock. Study its chic lines and notice how good they would be for you — the fetching drop shoulder yoke and the snappy pleats that give such a slim effect below the waist. The novelty cottons in vogue would be perfect to use—or travel prints in silk or crepe, and sheer wool, too.

Pattern 9862 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards 39-inch fabric and 1 yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

ORDER YOUR COPY OF THE NEW MARIAN MARTIN SPRING PATTERN BOOK. CROFT PLANT ENLARGED

Forced to action by the continued and ever-increasing demand for Croft ale from the first day of repeal, officials of the Croft Brewing Company of Roxbury Crossing today began preparations for enlarging its plant and installation of additional machinery necessary in brewing.

When repeal became effective, Ralph P. Bischoff, president of the company, expected a large demand for the concern's product, but he did not expect that [illegible] with its large number of employees would soon be working 20 hours daily in an effort to meet the insistent call for more and yet more ale.

But despite the continued adding of workers and perpetual running of the up-to-date machinery the demand still exceeds the supply, Mr. Bischoff declared. And for this reason the executive plans to rush the expansion at top speed.

Think of it! A free Rental Bureau right in the heart of the downtown shopping center. R. H. White Co., in co-operation with the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, has established this unique service. You are invited to visit here with Barbara Holmes at any time.

Repeal Keeps Them Moving

Demand far exceeding the capacity for ale at the Croft Brewing Co., at Roxbury, has started officials on a plan of enlarging the plant to care for orders.

CONGRESS EYES MOVE TO HALT AIR INQUIRY

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.
Copyright, 1934, for the Boston Evening American

Washington, Jan. 24.—Attempts to head off an honest, fearless and untrammeled investigation of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce will be vigorously resisted if Congress heeds the public protests against the events in Sec. Roper's department during the past six months.

The first indirect reference to the aeronautics branch on the floor of the Senate has come in connection with a mysterious resolution offered by Sen. McCarran of Nevada and now before the committee on rules.

PROVIDES NEW COMMITTEE

The McCarran resolution provides for an amendment to the standing rules of the Senate "for the purpose of creating a new standing committee on aeronautics and aviation."

In offering this resolution Senator McCarran ignored any reference to the acts of [illegible] and disruption that have upset the morale of the aeronautics branch and replaced its technical experts with a group of political appointees.

Adoption of the McCarran resolution would remove the aeronautics branch from the jurisdiction of the Senate committee on commerce, which perfected and recommended to the Senate the air commerce act of 1926.

Under this law the secretary of commerce was charged with the responsibility of promoting and regulating civil aeronautics and was provided with an assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics to assist him in the general supervision of the aeronautics branch.

WOULD PERMIT POLITICS

Adoption of the McCarran resolution would enable those senators who have been permitted by Secretary Roper to put their political appointees in control of the aeronautics branch to have an influential voice in the selection of the new committee which would determine the course of any investigation of Secretary Roper's conduct of the aeronautics branch that the Senate might order.

In view of the long service of Mr. Roper as a member of the board of trustees of Duke University at Durham, N. C., founded and endowed by the power magnate of that name, the personnel of the committee on rules to which the McCarran resolution has been referred becomes a matter of vital public interest.

PATMAN LAUDS BRISBANE PLAN

Washington, Jan. 24 (US)—Arthur Brisbane, noted journalist, was quoted on the floor of the House in support of a demand that the government issue currency rather than bonds to pay its debts.

Rep. Patman of Texas, denouncing a policy of bonded indebtedness on which bankers collect more interest than principal, read from Brisbane's column, "Today," as follows:

"The government, instead if insisting on bond issues and gigantic interest payments, could and should issue its own currency and pay bills with that. The government's promise to pay on green paper bearing no interest, would be exactly as good as its promise to pay—plus interest—on yellow paper. And issuing currency, instead of a crippling bond issue, would help government credit. A government, free of a four or five hundred million dollar interest load, would have better credit than with that annual interest burden added to its other obligations."

Britain and Spain Recognize Mendieta

Ely Finds Auto Buying on Full Force at Show

Auto Show officials were in agreement today that there would be a pronounced shortage of machines in the first few months of the year, if the continued buying interest at the present exhibition is any barometer.

Reports from other sections of the country show greater sales demand than makers had anticipated, so much so, in fact, that it will be difficult to catch up with the actual sales, even with a speeding up in production.

ELY GUEST AT SHOW

Officials here declared that buying interest started [illegible] at the beginning of the show and has been steadily increasing ever since. Attendance also has been more than gratifying with the crowds attending the show [illegible] bringing the figures up to more than 30 per cent over the totals for 1933.

Gov. Ely, Mrs. Ely, his son and daughter-in-law, and members of his staff were guests of officials at the show. The governor and his party arrived at 8 p. m. and remained for some time. He expressed himself as delighted at the show and complimented officials for their forward steps on the road to recovery.

He inquired about the attendance figures and expressed pleasure at the increases over last year and at the air of optimism, which has been noticeable at the show since its opening.

SALES SHOW BIG INCREASE

Officials reported that there were many sales and large lists of prospects as has been the case since the show opened. This fact was true in both the new and used car sections yesterday. Sales are reported far better than 1933 with no large increase in prices in the majority of models.

AUSTRIA PLANS LEAGUE APPEAL

Vienna, Jan. 24 (INS)—Formal announcement that Austria plans to demand convocation of an extraordinary session of the League of Nations council to discuss German interference with Austrian affairs was made here today.

The information concerning Austria's plans was conveyed to Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, by Baron George Franckenstein, Austrian Minister to England.

Simultaneously the Austrian government revealed that Germany has failed to reply to an official communication sent to Berlin demanding that Germany cease interference in Austrian politics.

Earl of Athlone Sees Slow Gain in Britain

New York, Jan. 24 (AP).—The Earl and Countess of Athlone arrived aboard the Mauretania today on their way to the West Indies where they are to be the guests of Sir Bede Clifford, governor of the Bahamas. The earl is a brother of Queen Mary of England.

"Things are improving in England, very slowly, however," the earl said. "They are improving especially if you look to the unemployment lists as a barometer of conditions."

Policeman Admits Many Holdups

Chicago, Jan. 24 (INS).—Policeman [illegible] was under arrest today charged with a career of banditry that he admitted included 13 holdups since he joined the police force last March.

Bernot was captured as he robbed a railroad ticket agent of $29.

Detectives said he confessed to stealing the automobile which he drove to work daily.

President Foley Reported Better

The condition of President John J. Foley of the Cambridge City Council, confined to the Municipal Hospital with a severe throat ailment, was reported better today.

"Mr. Foley's condition is better today. He has shown much improvement," said a bulletin issued at the hospital today.

NORFOLK PRISON COLONY PROBE REVEALS JOB FRAUDS

Special Massachusetts Commission Assured of Cooperation

A special state commission created to initiate interestate compacts on labor and industry with other northeastern industrial states today reported to the Legislature that five of these states have agreed to co-operate in the movement with Massachusetts.

They are New York, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Maine.

The group are on record as favoring this program:

Legislation giving support to the labor provisions of the NRA codes; adoption of the federal child labor amendment in states where this action has not taker place; a mandatory minimum wage law; legislation regulating the hours of women and minors and of night work by men; the gradual elimination of industrial home work.

An interstate compact containing all of the items in the program, with the exception of the child labor amendment, the comission stated, is now being drafted by the joint state commissions and the draft will be later brought before the legislature for approval.

As an aid in allowing Massachusetts to attain the sought-for goal, the commission filed specific legislation which it urged be passed at this session.

It asked the Legislature to enactment immediately a law supporting the labor provisions of the NRA, a mandatory minimum wage law applicable to men as well as to women, petition Congress to empower states to enter into compacts; extend the field for compacts to states outside the northeastern area, authorize the commission to continue its study and negotiations

FRIENDS RALLY TO AID WALSH

Friends of John Jackson Walsh, attorney and former candidate for governor, whose disbarment is sought by the Boston Bar Association, in a petition to the Suprema Court, were reported to be rallying to his defense, today, and preparing to help him battle the case.

The association's petition claimed that Walsh had collected more than $6000 for a client and that he made no report of the collection. The petition continues that the client subsequently secured a judgment against him, and that Walsh paid only $120 of this, and then filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition.

It was learned that several of Walsh's friends called on him last night and started to prepare plans for the fight in his behalf.

Roxbury Driver Faces Death Charge

Harry C. Seaman, 33, of Rockland ave., Roxbury, will be arraigned in Roxbury court today on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of James F Flynn, 85, of Howland st., who died at City Hospital last night of injuries suffered when he was struck by the former's auto.

Flynn was injured while crossing Warren st. near his home, and died at the hospital four hours later

N.Y. HOLDS CLUE TO HOFFMAN

Police were awaiting word from New York state police on photographs and fingerprints of Charles Hoffman, bail jumper and alleged slayer of Adolph Sommer, aged Cambridge inventor, sent to Binghampton, N. Y., late yesterday, following a report he is in that city

Descriptions of John H. Kilgallen, 38, and "Big Bill" Reynolds also wanted by New York police, were sent along with the data on Hoffman. It is expected Boston officers will be sent to aid in the capture of the trio if they are located

Hoffman figured in one of the worst bail scandals in Suffolk and Middlesex counties when he was released on bail, which turned out to have been furnished by a "straw" owner of real estate, while awaiting arraignment on robbery charges. He defaulted the day Sommer was slain and police declare he was involved in the killing

Waltham Blocks Bus Lines Extension

The Waltham city council has rejected an application by the Lovell Bus Lines, Inc., of Maynard for permission to operate buses from Central sq., Waltham, to Watertown sq as part of a proposed through route from Hudson to Watertown

The application was opposed by the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Co., which operates a bus line on the same route, and the Boston, Worcester & New York Street Railway Co

Roxbury Club Plans Party and Dance

A costume party and old-fashioned dance sponsored by members of St. Francis de Sales Catholic Club of Roxbury will be held in the school hall Friday night

The affair is under the general direction of Rev. Joseph Keenan. In the upper hall there will be modern dancing and in the lower hall old-fashioned dancing.

EL-LYNN PLAN TO BOOST FARE

Narrow Gauge railroad riders would have to stand for a five-cent fare boost under a proposed schedule of fares submitted today to the Boston Transit Commission in connection with the suggested hookup between the Narrow Gauge and the Boston Elevated.

The schedule was submitted by Atty. Samuel Hoar, representing the Narrow Gauge, the heads of which have submitted a proposal to the Elevated which would eliminate the necessity for ferry service and forward Narrow Gauge charges passengers to and from Lynn 15 cents a ride, and passengers to and from Revere and Winthrop 10 cents a ride, these fares entitling them to the ferry ride to and from Boston.

Under the proposed new schedule, passengers from Lynn would pay 10 cents on the Narrow Gauge and another 10 cents to come to Boston on the Elevated from Day sq., East Boston.

Revere and Winthrop passengers would pay a nickel on the Narrow Gauge and a dime on the Elevated.

According to Atty. Hoar, this would give the Elevated from 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 new fares annually and would supply sufficient revenue to support an extension of the tunnel to Day sq., less than a mile, and net a substantial yearly profit.

WORK MORE, EARN MORE, SPEND MORE IN 1934

FIRST MILLION PASSED IN FUND CAMPAIGN

Drive Workers Cheer as Total Passes Quarter Mark

Goal	$4,500,000.00
Total to date	$1,012,427.90
Still needed	$3,487,572.10
Days to go	23

Spurred on by the knowledge that their efforts have resulted in the collection of the first $1,000,000 towards the ultimate goal of $4,500,000, workers of the Boston Emergency Campaign of 1934 today marshalled their forces and swung into a gigantic drive for the second million dollars

Undismayed by rain, bitter winds and mud-clogged streets, the hundreds of workers, many of them volunteers without pay, ceased their efforts with the coming darkness.

Tired, but happy, the workers cheered when they learned that the day's total of $117,306.90 had pushed the drive over the top and the first million was taken

Exact figures, as disclosed last night at the campaign headquarters, brought the total for the campaign to $1,012,427.90.

The day's total received a substantial boost as two anonymous givers donated $7000 and $4600 respectively.

Another family, consisting of a man and wife and six children donated $1.27 after being assured their name would not be made public. Another woman, who contributed only $1 last year, sent in a contribution of $500.

Tonight a special radio sketch of "Mr. and Mrs." will be given by the original characters, in the interest of the campaign. The presentation will be given over Station WBZ from 6:15 to 6:30.

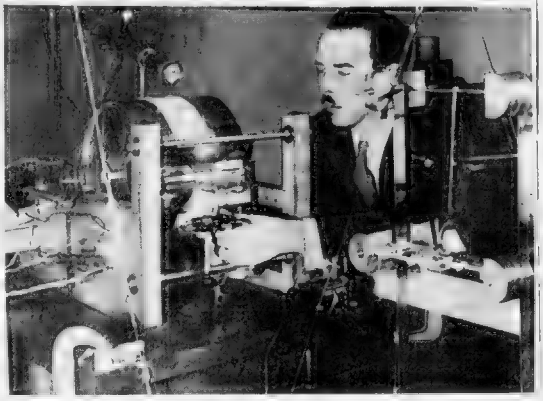
DELMONT HELD AS SLAYER

A Suffolk county grand jury will decide whether Joseph A. Delmont, son of Al Delmont, New England's first featherweight champion, must face a first degree murder or manslaughter chage fo the alleged slaying of Mrs. Julia De Vito? a week ago.

Judge Charles L. Carr after a plea by Atty. Michael Carchia, counsel for young Delmont, refused to reduce the charge to one of manslaughter, when Delmont was arraigned in Municipal court today.

Carchia said police had no evidence that Delmont had deliberately shot the girl and intimated it was an accident.

Tech Man Beats Quake to the Punch



Artificial earthquakes created at M. I. T. rock the miniature buildings erected in Cambridge to test the new stress recorder developed by A. C. Ruge, research associate in the department of civil engineering. The new device promises important advances in the knowledge of earthquake resistant construction. The apparatus consists of tiny mirrors fixed between building columns and by means of a prism transmits pencil points of light to a revolving drum where stresses are recorded on photographic paper.

GYPSY HELD AS KIDNAPER

His Majesty King Tena Bimbo, ruler of all the gypsies in North America, and his daughter, Princess Anna, alias Mary Nichols, came to more grief in Municipal Court today.

The king was held in $30,000 for New York police for alleged kidnaping of Mary Adams in New York, two years ago.

Princess Anna, despite the atmosphere of a two months' old baby in her arms, was held in $10,000 for default of $5000 bail in New York in connection with a grand larceny charge there

Bimbo is already in the toils of the law for alleged beating and robbery of his son-in-law, Charles Fisk, last Sunday in a South End house.

The baby failed to help Princess Anna, because when she pleaded for low bail for the infant's sake, Sergt. Tiernan told the court both mother and baby would get better care in Charles st. jail than they receive under their own conditions of living.

Very seriously, oh, very seriously indeed, the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate newspaper, today nominated President Emeritus A. Lawrence Lowell for the U. S. Senate.

If Dr. Lowell would run for the Republican nomination he would save the G. O. P. in Massachusetts, the Crimson said editorially, and he would save good Republicans from following Republican Club Pres. Judson Hannigan's advice to vote for Democrat David I. Walsh.

Whereupon the matter was put right up to Dr. Lowell at his Marlboro st. home by the Boston Evening American. That is it was put up to him by way of his secretary, Miss Nora Dwyer.

"Oh, ha-ha-ha!" or something equivalent in a much nicer feminine giggle, was the reply.

Then after a moment's conference with Dr. Lowell, Miss Dwyer reminded the reporter of the Lowell rule of two decades that "he doesn't talk to the newapaper boys."

"You understand that of course," she added.

"Yes, but that was different."

"Wouldn't there be a bit of indirect comment on how Dr. Lowell feels about running for Senator?"

"I'm sorry" (another slight giggle) I'm afraid not."

And that was that.

New Device Aids Builders Resist Strain of Tremors

Pentrating the secrets of nature A. G. Gage, youthful assistant in the department of civil engineering at M. I. T. has evolved a new weapon to halt the ravages of earthquakes. Basing his research upon the theory that toppling buildings constitute the greatest menace to human life in earthquake zones, the young scientist sought a solution for the vexatious problem of quake-induced collapse of building frames.

He has found the answer in a small apparatus which is engaging the attention of building designers throughout the world. The delicate machine consists of tiny mirrors fixed between miniature building supports, whose sway in manufactured earthquakes motivates a light ray to inscribe on a photographic drum a record of the column movements. The graphs on the drum give the engineer a keystone upon which to base his intricate mathematical calculations for stress in beams, columns and girders.

Heretofore, engineers have relied upon observations of earthquake effects and destruction study to understand the horizontal and vertical motion of the earth as it responds to earthquake shock. The stress induced by earthquakes have in the past been measured by a study of seismograph recordings, but the determination of stresses in terms of force pounds is unobtainable from seismograph readings.

The invention of the Tech scientist is expected to be of great value to building designers in tremor territories.

While New England is free from major earthquake action, several minor shocks have been reported within recent years. New York skyscrapers need never fear the earthquake shock since the great metropolis has a solid rock foundation recognized as the best natural earthquake resistant.

Since the new instrument will record the exact nature of the shock and the stress which the shock exerts in the building frame, an invaluable contribution to science is the tribute paid the device by engineers.

Melrose Man to Wed Simmons Grad

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Featherstone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gervase Featherstone, of Hamilton, to Raymond Alden Duffill of Melrose. Miss Featherstone is a graduate of Simmons College and Mr. Duffill of Williams College. He is the son of John H. Duffill, president of the Melrose Savings Bank.

FORBES REPORT GETS ELY O. K.

Gov. Ely today joined with State Auditor Hurley in expressing agreement with the report on Norfolk prison colony made by W. Cameron Forbes.

He joined with the criticism of disciplinary methods in use there, said they expressed the beliefs of himself and Commissioner of Corrections Frederick J. Dillon, and declared reforms would be effected.

Hurley said he agreed with many of orbes' criticisms and recommendations, but refused to discuss Forbes' theory of penalogy.

Forbes, former governor-general of the Philippines and ex-ambassador to Japan, completed his review of the prison entirely independent of the probe by Auditor Hurley

The latter's report will be ready February 8.

O fthe Forbes report the Governor said:

"The Forbes report is an indorsement of principles on which Norfolk is founded, and indicative of Prof. Sayre's reorganization plans for our penal institutions.

"It calls for abandonment of Charlestown State prison. It approves Norfolk, but advocates some changes inthe mehtods of treatment of youthful offenders —which is our most difficult problem.

"It criticizes disciplinary methods at Norfolk, and this condition Commr. Dillon and myself have felt for some time was the weakness there."

GILL ACCUSED OF IGNORING WAR VETS

Hurley Learns "Spare" House Man Operated Private Agency

Civil service lists have been ignored by Supt. Howard B. Gill of the Norfolk state prison colony in staff appointments and places have been filled through a private employment agency operated by a "spare" house officer at the prison, the Boston Evening American learned today

Despite numerous complaints to the State Department of the American Legion Supt. Gill has continued to slight war veterans in his apointments, according to charges filed with Civil Service Commissioner James M. Hurley

TESTS DISREGARDED

These are among the charges made against the administration of the prison colony and may be included in the lengthy report which State Auditor Francis X. Hurley is preparing for Gov Ely.

This newspaper has learned that at least 10 of the best positions on the colony staff are occupied by persons who never took a Civil Service examination

Affadavits in the possession of this newspaper charge that Supt Gill refused to publish notice at the prison colony that the civil service board had set a date for examinations for supervising house officers despite the fact that he filed wi the board a sworn statement tha he had given such notice.

HIRES THROUGH "AGENCY"

It was further learned that Superintendent Gill, contrary to stat regulations, had appointed sever watch officers who had never take Civil Service examinations and tha they are still occupying those posi tions at the colony. Their name are Luce, Ellis, Clark, Willoughby Stark, Smith and Rawlinson.

These men were brought to th colony for appointment by th "spare" house officer, one Mc Kenzie, who in his spare time ac cording to the charges, conduct a Franklin employment agency.

Another man, occupying the im portant position of assistant su perintendent, has never taken Civil Service examination for th post. He is Arthur Farley, appoint ed by Supt. Gill to take the plac of the man known as Tom Brow who resigned several weeks ag when State Auditor Hurley ques tioned him about his leadership o a cult within the prison walls.

R. W. Sanford, another Gill ap pointee, is known as the sociologis of the colony It's supposed to be full time job, but charges hav been made that Sanford comes an goes when he pleases Charles Morris, another colon worker who entered the servic without a Civil Service rating on the payroll as a house office but does not act as one. His dutie are those of a clerk.

INMATES HAVE RUN

With all this array of non-civ service employes, the Gill admin stration is having considerable diff culty in keeping the convicts fro making a wholesale dash for fre dom over the new gray walls, has been learned

It was only last Monday nigh that Corporal Lawrence, on gat duty at the camp, allowed a part of entertainers to get into the pris on with three quarts of 190-proo alcohol

Not long after they departe House Officer Timothy Shea mad his rounds of the first floor of th hospital building and cut his han as he tried one of the window Closer examination revealed tha many windows had been smashed

Further revelations of amazing conditions behind the walls of Norfolk prison colony, the inside stories of breaks for freedom, sabotage, convicts' defiance of guards, belated discoveries of murderous weapons in cells, and strange methods of discipline will be published in a series of stories in the Boston Evening American

You Can Have Glossy, Soft Ringlets

Beauty Problems

Question: My hair isn't particularly dry, but it's rather dull. How can I make it glossy and "live" looking? I'd appreciate any suggestions you can give me.—Miss E. R., Weymouth.

Answer: A vinegar rinse will bring out hidden lights in drab brown hair, and lemon rinses will give it lovely reddish glints. Neither of these will harm the hair. A few drops of brilliantine sprayed on the hair after it is waved will make it glossy, and this seems to hold the curls in place longer, too.

• • •

Complexion

Question: I am 20 years old, but my skin is oily, and covered with blackheads and pimples. It has been that way for five years, and it doesn't seem to get better. I wish you could help me.—A. M., Newton Upper Falls.

Answer: Such cases of acne should be treated by a reliable, reputable skin specialist or physician. My leaflet on acne has helped many people with milder conditions which have not lasted so long.

• • •

Lovely Contours

Question: I'm not very old, but my jaw line is already beginning to sag. Please, Miss Deschamps, give me some advice on how to correct this, as I'm beginning to dread looking in the mirror.—C. A., Newton.

Answer: You can get your jaw line back into a neat semblance of its former beauty by light massage and brisk patting with a good cream daily, use of a good astringent after cleansing, and by applying plenty of cold water to brace and firm the muscles.

Lovely Skin

Question: I'd like so much to have a lovely, fresh-looking skin. But mine is quite sallow. What do you suppose causes this, and how can I correct it?—Miss C. D., South Boston.

Answer: Sallowness is often caused by a sluggish circulation, a poorly balanced diet, or improper elimination. Determine the cause and correct it. Meanwhile faintly rose-tinted powder will temporarily disguise the yellowish tint to your skin.

The Marry-Go-Round

"It's funny," remarked the ex-tippler, "a lot of cool-blooded gentlemen, who never were tempted to touch a drink in their lives seem to have been selected to formulate the 'liquor control' laws in different states.

That reminds me of most of these eminent psychologists who write books on love, marriage and sex. One look at their photographs, and you know that it's all THEORY with them. They simply COULDN'T have had the experience!"

• • •

"Now MY idea," continued the ex-tippler, "would be for these cool-blooded, irreproachable gentlemen to call in a lot of Old Soaks for consultation and let the hard drinkers tell them just where the pitfalls and temptations lie and how liquor should be 'controlled.' The rummies could discuss the question with authority and enthusiasm.

• • •

"There are thousands and thousands of hard-drinkers in this country today who were only soft-drinkers before the Noble Experiment. And THEY know how they GOT that way!

That's why I say, call in the Old Soaks and let them give these theorists the real low-down. Get the bottle OUT OF THE HOME!

POSED BY CLAUDETTE COLBERT

By Therese Deschamps

LIQUID INCENSE TO put on your electric light bulbs or radio tubes . . . perfumed balls to scent your bath luxuriously....clay compacts to take the place of regular sachets . . . fragrant counters of gaily colored soaps and bath salts (they even have effervescent bath tablets now, you know) . . . bath mitts for perfumed shower baths.

Well, I thought I could never possibly come across anything new in the perfumed beauty accessory field, but I have—and it's a pleasant surprise. I know you'll be every bit as delighted with this latest arrival as I am.

You'd NEVER guess what is Chanel's lovely PERFUME BRACELET! This attractive new gadget is made of cork, and is almost as light as the proverbial feather. It's natural color cork with the name "Chanel" on a tiny metal plaque on the inside. Somehow, that's almost as satisfying as owning an original model, and having the label of a famous designer to display to your admiring and envious feminine friends.

The bracelet itself isn't perfumed when you buy it (which is just as well, because any woman prefers to select her own scent). But here's the ingenious idea that explains everything: it's made of highly absorbent cork, so a few drops of perfume sprinkled on the inside will cling for hours and hours, and give off an elusive, fragrant aroma at even the most languorous gesture.

You can make this cork bracelet do twenty-four hour duty too, incidentally. When you aren't wearing it, simply lay it in your handkerchief box, or among your silk lingerie instead of a sachet. Isn't that a clever idea?

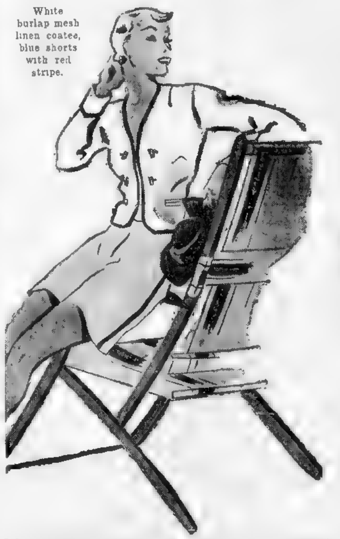
When Chanel visited this country recently to design glamorous, striking costumes for a few lucky movie stars she wore one of these cork bracelets she had originated for herself. It caused such a stir and so many people admired it, that she finally consented to share her clever invention with American women. It has become a big hit both in Hollywood and New York.

And now you can get Chanel's perfume bracelet right here in Boston. I know, because I saw it in a local shop a few days ago. It's no more expensive than ordinary, every-day jewelry—and it's decidedly novel and smart.

• • •

I wouldn't tantalize you by describing interesting beauty adjuncts and then send you on a wild-goose chase all over town to find them. If you want to know where to find these Chanel bracelets I'll gladly tell you. But please don't forget to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your inquiry. Address your letter to Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Denim Bell Boy Shorts Set



White burlap mesh linen coatee, blue shorts with red stripe.

LONG SLEEVES, modestly cuffed to the wrists, finish off an abbreviated bell boy jacket of white linen, topping shorts, that start out quite formally (at least we always thought a stripe on masculine trousers was the height of formality, even though doormen wore them, as well as natty consuls and military attaches!), and end suddenly a good way above the knee.

The jacket would make a good finish to a sailing outfit, if worn atop a striped crew neck shirt and dingy duck slacks, or, again, it might be worn with a nautical navy blue skirt.

New Guises for Stand-by Sweets

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Wednesday morning broadcast over station WAAB.

EVEN BEFORE the days of child psychology—most children were engrossed in the important subject of what they were going to have for dessert.

Now that we take our children's health and happiness so seriously and comfortably avoid adult inhibitions, this matter of desserts is one we have to face from two angles—the mental one and the physical. In other words, the children's desserts have to be interesting to taste and see as well as being wholesome.

It isn't such a large order. It has its reward. Not only in the gusto with which the children attack the offered pudding, or whatever, but in their appreciative praise. Does the cook's ego react to praise? It is the salt of effort and the sugar of the daily routine. Now isn't it?

MARSHMALLOW MINT APPLES

Select apples of uniform size. Peel and core. Boil 2 cups sugar and ½ cup water gently until clear. Color with a few drops of green vegetable coloring and flavor with peppermint flavoring before putting apples to boil. Let cook slowly, turning often, until the apples are tender. They will be almost transparent when done. Remove from syrup and cool.

Just before serving place marshmallows over hole in top of apple and four around the base. Stand in warm (not hot) oven until marshmallows fluff.

APRICOT SOUFFLE

4 tbsp. butter
4 tbsp. flour
2 cups milk
⅛ tsp. salt
½ cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
3 egg-yolks
3 egg-whites
1 small can apricots

Use a double boiler. Make a white sauce as follows: Melt butter, add flour and stir until smooth. Add milk and cook 15 minutes, stirring constantly until thickened. Add sugar and salt. Pour over the beaten egg yolks. Cool. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and vanilla.

Arrange apricot halves on the bottom of a greased baking dish and pour in souffle. Bake in a pan of hot water in moderate oven 375 deg. for 45 min. Serve with fruit juice as sauce. Serves 8.

Chocolate souffle may be made by adding 3 sq. melted chocolate to white sauce and omitting the fruit.

PEPPERMINT CANDY ICE-CREAM

2 cups thin cream
¼ lb. peppermint stick candy few grains salt

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA

I am a young man in my early twenties, very much in love with a girl three years my junior. She says she loves me too, and will consent to announce our engagement when she graduates this spring. Fine so far, but, as usual, there is a bit of trouble. We are of different religions, and a friend of hers has told her that we could never be happy together under those circumstances.

Now I'm perfectly willing to do anything she wants about that. I'll change to her church if she wants me to, for I think it's right that the man should be the one to do the changing, but I do wish I could persuade her that we would be happy.

We couldn't bear to be separated. What do you think?

Medford D. E. G.

DEAR D. E. G.:

I wouldn't have the slightest hesitation about marrying this girl if you're so certain that you're really in love.

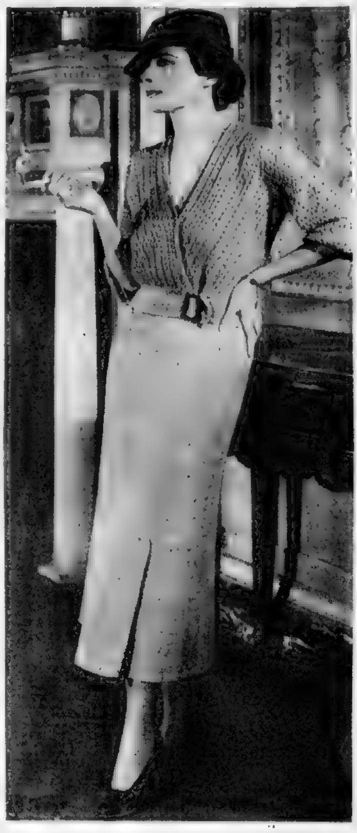
I consider that you're in the right about the religious question too, for anyone should admit that the purpose of religion is not to part, but to join those who love each other.

Think it over very carefully, and follow the dictums of your heart. PANDORA.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

Do you ask "What?" when you do not hear what someone says? It's much better to say, "I beg your pardon," or "I'm sorry, I didn't understand."

Thoroughbred Knit Frock



Fleisher Yarns.

By Annice Brink

Thoroughbred is our own name for the knitted frock whose directions we offer you today—and everything about it justifies the title, don't you think?

• • •

First it has the surplice line that is so kind to fuller figures, and yet gives a certain svelte smartness to the curves popular even with the slightest figure today. Its sponsors have called it a "matinee" frock because it is one of those versatile knits that has a certain dressed up quality about it and is as much at home in the city as in the country.

• • •

A ribbed stitch around the hips makes for superlative fit—in other words you don't have to have the skirt top gathered on an elastic band, which invariably spoils the snugness. A box pleat in front looks like a double kick pleat, and sleeves are full below the elbow, ending abruptly, in obedience to fashion's command.

• • •

Directions are simple so that even a beginner should have no difficulty turning out a lovely hand made thing. You may have them by writing to us, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request. The address is Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston.

If You've Connie Bennett's Eyes or La Hepburn's Chic, Wear Her Hat

By Victoria Gaines

WE'VE HAD HOLLYWOOD diets, Hollywood dresses and Hollywood make-up—and now it's Hollywood hats! So far, a New York gal's still able to call her soul her own, but it probably won't be long now before that, too, will be neatly wrapped and labeled "Made in Hollywood."

At any rate, the first Hollywood hat shop in the country has just been opened in New York, where hats worn by famous screen stars are reproduced for you—and you—and YOU, in copies that are both chic and cheap.

COPY YOUR FAVORITE

If you've panted for the perfectly adorable sailor that Ann Harding wears in "Gallant Lady," or Irene Dunne's cute lid in "Success Story," you can gallop right down to this shop and buy it for your very own. If your friends all tell you that you look like Claudette Colbert or Connie Bennett, you can take a fashion tip from these famous stars, and wear the very same headgear they find most becoming to them.

Ann Harding's off-the-face hat, for example, would do things for any fair-haired type, and Katharine Hepburn's pancake sailor would do just as much for brunette beauties. Only . . . make sure that these Hollywood hats go to your head materially, not mentally. For any girl's head might be turned by the glamour and glory of wearing Hepburn's or Harding's very own hat—and look like a nightmare instead of a "dream walking."

STEAL MARCH ON STARS

Among the other screen stars whose original models will be copied are Mae West, Billie Burke, Fay Wray and Gloria Stuart, with many more to come.

Some of these hats even steal a march on the stars themselves, being shown in this shop before the pictures play on Broadway. So that if your idea of a thrill is beating your best friend to it, you can wear your idol's latest hats even before she wears them herself on the screen.

One short cut to chic is to get a complete costume that you've liked in some picture—not just the hat, but the frock as well. Yes, you can even do that, so Hollywood-minded have we become these days.

You can walk right out of a screen dress shop with Dolores Del Rio's newest frock tucked firmly under your arm, and right into the screen hat shop for the same hat worn with that particular frock in the picture. And since our Hollywood stylists know their modes pretty well, you'll seldom make a fashion faux pas that way.

"Good Night" Graciously

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I live with my brother and my sister-in-law, and they entertain at bridge a great deal. I am usually out in the evening with my friends and very often when I come in . . . usually it is quite late . . . they are still playing cards.

Should I just greet them and go on to my room and go to bed, as I have to get up early in the morning, or should I join them playing, or should I just sit around and wait until they are finished so that I can help with the serving? I never know what to do, and I do not like to hurt my sister-in-law's feelings, but then too, I dislike just sitting around in order to help with the serving, especially as I am very busy during the day, and her guests are not my guests.

Please tell me what you would do in a case like this? I know all her friends and like them but they are not my friends.

L.

I am sure that your sister-in-law and her friends will understand very well that you want to have your own friends and be with them in the evenings, and that you do not especially care to wait around for her and guests to finish their bridge game. So when you come home and enter the room, make a point of being delightfully gracious in your greetings of the guests, and then say good-night, explaining forthrightly that you must get up early the next morning. This is a circumstance in which, very definitely graciousness is demanded in the way you say just whaat you have to say. Then your leaving the company of guests will not seem a bit brusque.

To End a Cough In a Hurry, Mix This at Home

Saves Big Dollars! No Cooking!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a purer, more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs only one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up obstinate coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, clearing the air passages, and soothing away the inflammation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

The End of a Long Chase: Malcewicz Is Wrestling Londos ↕ Also an End to Joe's Interruption of Jimmy's Operas

By AUSTEN LAKE

Joe Malcewicz, the Polish panther-man, who has the mischievous, schoolboy trick of bouncing uninvited into rings where other wrestlers are giving a party and prowling around while uttering zoo sounds, flashing a fearsome row of fangs, and shouting that he wishes to be wrestled with immediately, is going to be accommodated this evening at the Boston Garden. He will meet a lumpy Greek named Jimmy Londos, whose little drama he has disturbed so boorishly within late weeks.

There was that time at that Swedish church social in Worcester when Jimmy was in the middle of a great emotional scene, where he thrashes around giving off baritone roars that seem to well up from the depths of his passion and waves his opponent by the scalp. You recall the passage? And just where Jimmy was rising to artistic heights and unscrewing his man's foot with the bemused attitude of a motorman spinning a handbrake, up bounces Malcewicz, shedding his disguise as he squeezed between the ropes, and goes to prowling, showing his tusks and yelling that Londos is only a chump, a fourth-rater, and a shoddy counterfeit whom it would give him much pleasure to expose.

Well, by the time a posse was organized among the church members and Joe was ejected, Londos had lost his inspired glow and for the rest of the evening he fumbled and wallowed like a fussy old gampus, balling up his lines and missing his cues. So what might have been a great dramatic achievement, turned into a wooshing and spouting of a very honky-tonk order, and Londos never forgave Joe for this.

That wasn't the worst. Three weeks ago at the Arena Londos had just peeled off his satin ring robe and was winding up his muscles preliminary to swelling his chest in one of the famous pouter-pigeon struts where he makes his hauser-like sinews jump and quiver to the great delight of the patrons. This is an impressive moment and a sort of pious ritual with Londos, so that he will inflate himself like a pneumatic Christmas toy and pivot slowly so the ringside fans may catch fullface and profile views.

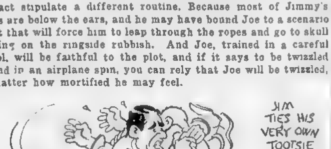
Joe Forces Jimmy to Wrestle in Self Defense

Now Jimmy had scarcely begun the first itchy shiver and gulped only half of the air necessary to swell his chest to the maximum when there was a wild commotion in the working press section, and up bounces Malcewicz, grunting and blowing like a sea elephant. Well, it caught Londos right in the middle of a quiver, and he opened his mouth in a great gape that let out all his air and collapsed his chest like a child's balloon. It was a pathetic sight, too, to see Jimmy standing there, like a flabby oyster, his muscles hanging down in huge, candle drips while Joe went prowling and unfurling his teeth, some of which were encrusted with battleship brass. It was more than human nerves could stand, and Jimmy suddenly let off a screech like a fire siren and flew into a tantrum of stampings like a spoiled child when his mama denies a sugar-cookie. "I mak for feex yoo" he bellowed in pure Hellenic, and, hitching up his stomach, which had slipped down around his knees in the moment of excitement, he turned to a secretary who always sits below a ringpost corner with a portable typewriter unlimbered, and dictated contract terms in a leaky-valve hiss, which Malcewicz later ran around and signed.

* * *

After Tonight Jimmy's Artistry Is Safe

Now, I don't know whether Joe has read this contract carefully, and when he says that he will pluck out the lush fuzz that grows in a rich, weedy burgeoning on Londos' chest until he has picked him like a holiday goose, he may find that the terms of the contract stipulate a different routine. Because most of Jimmy's lumps are below the ears, and he may have bound Joe to a scenario script that will force him to leap through the ropes and go to skull cruising on the ringside rubbish. And Joe, trained in a careful school, will be faithful to the plot, and if it says to be twizzled around in an airplane spin, you can rely that Joe will be twizzled, no matter how mortified he may feel.



JIM TIES HIS VERY OWN TOOTSIE IN A BOW-KNOT!

But it is possible to make innocent mistakes. I recall seeing Londos, several winters ago at the Garden, squatting on the small of Rudy Dusek's back, rowing his legs with the full layback of a single sculler. After rowing a full Henley distance, with Dusek shutting his eyes and squealing with pain all the way, he grew bored and snatched up a bosom full of arms and legs, twisting them in a grapevine tangle and wrenching back and forth. But the odd part about this was that the more Londos wrenched the more his own steaming features began to writhe in agony, until suddenly we noticed that he had been twisting his own foot. Well, when this was called to his attention, he was properly piqued and up and spanked Dusek about 13 inches from the end of his nose with a hand like a bunch of bananas and sprinkling him all over with half Nelsons, four-fifth Andersons and two-third Swensons.

Yet one way or another, barring innocent mistakes, Londos is going to settle this business of having his operas interrupted at the crowning point of artistic expression. Win or lose, after tonight he can shiver his hauser-like muscles and gulp down gallons of chest filling air without suddenly being collapsed like a huge oyster when Malcewicz comes bouncing into the ring, to prowl, show his fangs and demand to be wrestled with.

'PUBLICITY,' VINES SAYS OF SUIT

Denver, Jan. 24 (INS)—Ellsworth Vines, Jr., newest luminary of the professional tennis galaxy, today labeled as "a publicity stunt" the $250,000 damage suit filed in Los Angeles against Vines, William T. Tilden, II, William O'Brien and the Tilden tours by Norman L. Sper, Hollywood sports syndicate operator, for alleged breach of oral contract.

"Since there can be no possible basis for the breach of contract suit filed by Sper, I am inclined to view his action as a clever gesture to obtain nation-wide publicity," said Vines, who defeated Tilden here last night in the sixth stanza of their cross-country tour.

A two-year contract with Sper for newspaper syndication of tennis stories under Vines' name expired two months ago, and their business association had terminated amicably, Vines said.

NO CONTRACT

"While I discussed various possibilities with Sper during the period of our contract, there never was any agreement, understanding or verbal contract between us regarding my activities after the expiration of our contract," Vines asserted. "Sper's suit is 'over my head,' and I just can't understand what he is driving at unless he is making a bid for publicity. But I'll know more about it when we reach Los Angeles."

Sper, in his suit, alleged that, under an oral contract, he had planned a nation-wide tour for Vines and Tilden and already had arranged for distribution of publicity when he was discharged by Vines.

THOUGHT SPER FRIEND

"Together with O'Brien, I was introduced to Sper by Vines in Los Angeles one morning last year," Tilden said. "My understanding was that Sper was a friend and adviser of Vines and not his manager. However, no business was discussed at the meeting."

"Sper had nothing whatever to do with arranging the cross-country tour of Vines and Tilden," O'Brien asserted.

TWO MAXES SIGN FOR COAST BOUT

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Jan. 24—Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, signed a contract today for Schmeling to meet Max Baer in a return match of 12 rounds in Los Angeles sometime in April.

CANADIANS TOP U. S. TOURISTS

Glasgow, Scotland, Jan. 24 (AP)—Touring United States and Canadian hockey teams met here today, and the Ottawa Shamrocks, undefeated on the European jaunt, came out the victors over the American six by five goals to one.

The Shamrocks have won 18 games of 19 played, the Lawn Tennis Club of Praha holding them to a tie in the other contest.

The United States team is composed of eastern players, many of them former college stars, and are playing an exhibition tour preparatory to participating in the world amateur championships at Milan, Italy, Feb. 3-11.

Babe Herman Serious Holdout

Chicago, Jan. 24 (INS)—Floyd "Babe" Herman, who until last season held an enviable slugging record, presented the Chicago Cubs today with their first serious hold out problem in several years.

Herman has sent his 1934 contract back to the National League club unsigned. He was reported to be incensed over a proposed salary slash.

"They didn't just cut my salary; they took a cleaver to it," Herman was quoted as saying at his home in Glendale, Cal.

It was indicated that the sum offered him for 1934 was considerably under that paid him last season, which was reported to be in the neighborhood of $20,000.

Twelve CUBS have signed their new contracts.

Panther Crouches for Garden Plunge

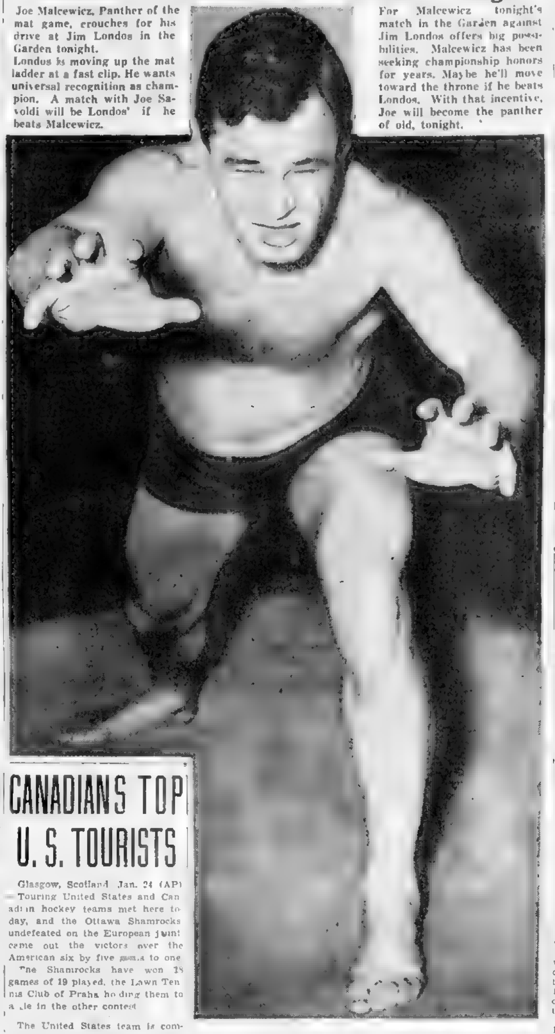
Londos is moving up the mat ladder at a fast clip. He wants universal recognition as champion. A match with Joe Savoldi will be Londos' if he beats Malcewicz.

For Malcewicz tonight's match in the Garden against Jim Londos offers big possibilities. Malcewicz has been seeking championship honors for years. Maybe he'll move toward the throne if he beats Londos. With that incentive, Joe will become the panther of old, tonight.



Ross-Petrolle Receipts Shock to Garden

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Jan. 24 (INS)—Without benefit of the bluster and blarney that go with a championship, Barney Ross, the lightweight champion, and Billy Petrolle, the old donkey-engine from Fargo, will do ten rounds of strictly a non-title nature at the New York Coliseum tonight before a crowded house. Crowded houses have happen around here with disconcerting infrequency.

In fact, the only one that New York boxing has hitherto known about for the last few years is the county jail. But that was before the "boxing war" started.

The Ross-Petrolle fight tonight will be only the opening gun of hostilities. The real broadside will be fired when James Archibald McLarnin come in here to fight the winner for the welterweight championship of the world. By that time, Madison Square Garden might be tottering on its pedestal, if it has a pedestal. It's only been using the one it had for a footrest, anyhow.

Meantime, Ross and Petrolle, who weren't wanted at the Garden, will play tonight to $30,000, which is doing it the difficult way. The fight will be held so far up in the Bronx that Petrolle is liable to exceed the age limit before he gets there.

The old limited has been running behind time for the last year or two and he plods and puffs a little on the grades now. But he's coming at 142 pounds, as against the haggard 138 he had to do for Ross in Chicago last year, and maybe he has a real chance. But the odds of 7 to 5 say he hasn't, it being figured that the five extra pounds he'll "pull" on the scales are a nothing compared to the weight of five extra year.

However, he's only 28 and he still thinks he can lick McLarnin if he can ever hit him again, which only goes to show [illegible] to an otherwise [illegible] never cap McLarnin [illegible] he won't even get [illegible] him a loud pu[illegible]

Ross, having beaten Canzoneri twice, naturally wants to [illegible] the class above because [illegible] pion is a man who pu[illegible] body in the money. He al[illegible] them on the floor and his [illegible] is lightweights of Jewish extraction. However, everybody [illegible] own taste. Ross thinks he can beat McLarnin; so does Petrolle and they're going in there tonight with the idea of proving who's the right man for the job.

Personally, I think they're both wrong.

Rabbit Signs at Own Figures

The Rabbit, who is all set to begin his 23d year in baseball, was sent a blank contract by President Emil Fuchs, and told to fill it out himself. Maranville mailed the contract, all filled out, to Fuchs and it was okayed immediately.

"In fact," said the Hub president, "I probably would have offered him at least $1500 more."

Panther's 4-Year Hunt Ends as He Meets Londos

By JACK CONWAY

Jim Londos w[illegible] his share of the world's heavyweight wrestling champ[illegible] when he meets "Panther" Joe Malcewicz in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Boston Garden tonight under the direction of Paul Bowser.

Londos [illegible] Pacific Coast [illegible] Western [illegible]

It will be [illegible] first appearance [illegible] in two years. It was [illegible] for him to battle Malcewicz [illegible] him for four years [illegible] to obtain a bout at the Garden.

"You must wrestle Malcewicz or stay out of the Garden," was the ultimatum Paul Bowser gave Londos.

The "Panther" has chased Londos to all parts of the country. Twice he hopped into rings as Londos prepared to battle another opponent and dared him to meet him. Twice [illegible] stepped out of the ring until Malcewicz was removed.

BETTING EVEN

Betting is even on the outcome of tonight's contest. Each wrestler has plenty of backers who are confident he will win.

The [illegible] wrestlers are in the best of condition. Londos arrived here accompanied by Ed White, his manager.

"Jim will win if he gets a fair break from the referee," said White. "I do not believe Paul Bowser will stand for a referee jobbing Londos as happened when Joe Savoldi received a fall over Jim in Chicago a year ago. Eliminate improper practices, and Londos will lick any wrestler in the world."

Malcewicz does not think so.

"I shall have Londos 40 per cent beat before he enters the ring," said Joe. "He fears me. The fact he avoided me for four years is proof enough of this statement."

EACH POST $1000

The rival heavyweights have each posted $1000 as a side bet. It is the first time since John Pesek and Nat Pendleton battled at the Grand Opera House 10 years ago that there has been a substantial side bet on a wrestling contest. When Pesek and Pendleton battled, each posted $5000.

Londos will receive a guarantee of $[illegible] tonight. He will also have the privilege of accepting [illegible] per cent of the gate in the event this sum runs larger than his guarantee. Jim was always a champion when it came to exacting his pound of flesh.

Malcewicz will pull down 12½ per cent of the gate. He says he will receive his real payoff when he pins Londos' shoulders to the mat.

The winner will demand a bout with Ed Don George, who is generally recognized as world's' heavyweight champion.

McCREADY GOOD PERFORMER

Earl McCready of Oklahoma, my idea of the best of the younger crop of wrestlers, will oppose Casey Kazanjian of Stanford in the semi-final.

There is an unusual strong preliminary card and there will be quite a few wrestlers on it who never before showed for Bowser.

Ernie Dusek of New York will meet Vic Christy of California, Ray Steele of California will collide with Harry Lundin of Cornell, Hal Rumberg of Washington will tangle up with John Spellman of Brown, Jim McMillin of Illinois will try to knock off Gene Ledoux of Canada, the gigantic Chief Strongbow of Arizona will oppose Joe Doakes of New York while Gino Garibaldi will be in there with Pat O'Hara of Atlanta.

Fred J. O'Brien Gave His Life to Youth

By JOE MOONEY

To know that the better part of a quarter of a century devoted to the welfare of the youth of this city had borne excellent fruit was the reward of Fred J. O'Brien, associate director of physical education in the Boston School Department, when he died at his home in Braintree today.

Here was a purist; here was a man who caught the undertone of adolescence and directed in harmony with the major movement in the civic symphony. Here was one of those rare men who could transfer something of the spirit of his own character to his pupils, a teacher's highest function.

Probably it was because Fred J. O'Brien never forgot that he had been a boy himself.

IRON BACKGROUND

Fred's boyhood was lived in the [illegible] background of South Boston and the Boston public schools. At South Boston High when the century turned he began his athletic career.

He was as good as the next in any game you'd care to mention. You were expected to be, if you came from Southie. But beyond that Fred had the quality of leadership. He captained his football team in 1902.

Athletes were few, equipment was scarce and the niceties of today—paid coaches and [illegible] playing conditions were almost non-existent.

But then, the greatest [illegible] baseball was still the baseball and it was of little consequence what you wore in the way of equipment when you were running for a touchdown.

At Bridgewater Normal, where he was an all 'round athlete for four years, and at Harvard, where he received his A. B. in 1911, Fred added greatly to his natural aptitude as a sports director.

LATIN SCHOOL COACH

Thus it was that when he was ready to leave the playing fields himself, and turn his talent to directing schoolboys to play properly, his first job was coaching at Brighton High—he was particularly fitted for his career.

Happily, the city was at the time putting its physical education program for the schoolboys on a new basis. The guiding genius was [illegible] J. Young.

O'Brien made a name for himself at Brighton and gained further attention as coach at Boston Latin School, where he turned out consistently fine sport teams.

He became associate director under Young in 1925, or a short time he was manager of one of Boston's largest sporting goods houses. Then he returned to work with Young in the development of a program which has been the model for [illegible] schools the country over [illegible]

"I found him an honest, capable associate, a faithful and affectionate friend. The school department has lost a great administrator, and a man who knew boys more intimately, who appreciating their difficulties more keenly than is given to most men in his profession," said Supt. of Schools Patrick T. Campbell.

'LISTLESS BRUINS MADE WINGS LOOK BAD TOO,' SAYS PILOT

SHORE IS ONLY ANSWER TO MYSTERY

By BILL GRIMES

"For years I listened to considerable weeping about my old Cougars making the Bruins look bad," commented Manager Jack Adams, after he had piloted his Detroiters through to a 3-to-1 victory over Boston last night at the Garden. So I take particular delight in stating that the Bruins were responsible for the poor showing of the Red Wings."

"Of course, I am far more tickled over the outcome than with the calibre of hockey. It was a poorly played game, just about as listless a contest as I have seen this season. But, bear in mind that it was a four point victory for Detroit.'

"If the Red Wings get a tie with Americans tomorrow night, I will be perfectly satisfied as far as this trip is concerned regardless of what happens in Toronto on Saturday."

Despite the shake up the Bruins were unable to [illegible] last night. They have dropped three in a row and have only been awarded three points in the last 10 games. Unless they snap out of their slump immediately, the Bruins will have little chance of getting into the play offs for with only 19 games to play, they are trailing the third place Black hawks by seven points.

CLUB IN SLUMP

There is something wrong with the Boston outfit. It is a better club than it has shown itself to be, during the last three weeks. The management has tried out about every possible combination but without success. Players have been traded and [illegible] but the club cannot win.

The Bruins are not laying down. They are hustling as best they can under the circumstances. I have never believed that the Bruins was a one-man club but since Eddie Shore has been under suspension Boston has skidded steadily and unless [illegible] a few victories with [illegible] the players' darbers is going to slump and then its curtains.

Eddie Shore will return to the Boston lineup either Sunday in New York or here next week against the Rangers. He may be able to instill a winning spirit but if he should fail to supply the spark needed to put the Bruins back in the games won column, then the real trouble will be evident.

While the Red Wings were sinking the Bruins, the Beavers were supplanting the Cubs as Canadian-American League pacemakers. The Cubs went down to a 4-to-1 defeat and dropped into second place one point up on the Rhode Island Reds.

DIAMONDS FOR RANGERS

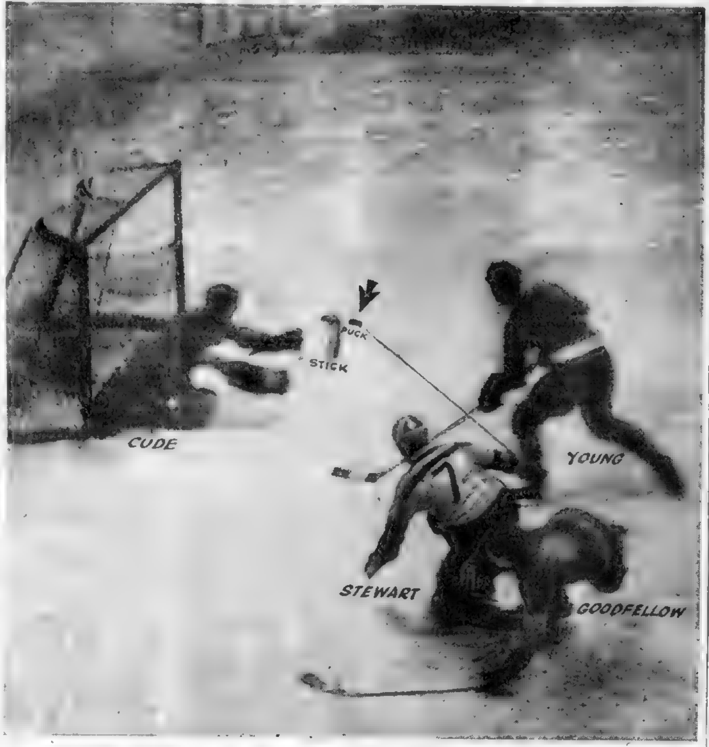
The Rangers celebrated their 400th N. H. L. game by beating the Ottawa Senators, 5 to 2, in New York. The original Rangers were presented with diamond [illegible].

Due to the [illegible] over Boston and Ottawa, the Red Wings and Rangers partly dissolved the [illegible] cornered first place [illegible] existed in the American division, moving out a full game from Chicago Black hawks, the only team in the league that was idle last night.

Other than that the Toronto Maple Leafs and Les Canadiens each picked up two more points, there was no serious damage done to the Canadian division standing. The Maple Leafs are leading the Flying Frenchmen by seven games while Maroons, Americans and Ottawa are only three points apart in their battle for third place.

The Maple Leafs [illegible] beat a [illegible] Maroons and [illegible] through with [illegible] of goals to win 5 to 4 while Les Canadiens [illegible] third period sprint, tacked a 6 to 2 defeat on the Americans.

Indian Roll and Split Second Stop in Ice Interlude



One bright bit of action in an otherwise dreary game at the Garden last night occurred when Bruin Nels Stewart soloed into the Red Wings defence and rifled a shot at Goalie Wilfred Cude. Goodfellow, Wing guardian, takes Nels out of the play with a flying block, while Cude throws his stick to deflect the puck. Young races to the boards to cover. Wings took our Bruins over the hurdles leisurely, 3-1.

BAILEY'S BILL UP BEFORE ICE GOVERNORS

New York Jan 24—The last, lingering echo of the "Ace" Bailey incident will be sounded today when the board of governors of the National Hockey League will sit in review of the famous case attempt to fix responsibility—and try to adjust a hospital bill of $8000.

That was the cost, according to Connie Smythe, Toronto manager, of weaning his star back from death's door after he sustained a fractured skull in a crash with Eddie Shore, Boston player, early in December.

Shore was suspended until January 28 for his part in the affair, witnesses agreeing that he had skated blindly into Bailey after being "pinched off" against the rail by another Toronto player. As Bailey lay senseless upon the ice, Reggie Horner knocked Shore down with a punch, inflicting painful injuries.

Bailey hovered between life and death for weeks but finally made a miraculous recovery and is now on the road to health.

Meantime, his club desires redress for the huge medical bill that was contracted during the player's illness. Manager Smythe says Toronto shouldn't pay it, but Owner Charley Adams, of Boston, says he won't. So, what?

That's what the board of governors is asking.

BOB QUINN IN TRADE MART

New York, Jan. 23 (US)—Admission that the Brooklyn club was working on a player-deal with another National League team was made today by Bobby Quinn, the club's business manager, but he declined to go into further detail.

Undercover reports, however, had the Dodgers trying to wean a left handed pitcher from the Cardinals, the names of Bill Walker and Jim Mooney being mentioned.

It also was stated that the club had decided not to trade Joe Stripp, third baseman, it being claimed that reports of dissension between Stripp and Manager Max Carey were untrue.

Devens Still Smiling

Mr. Fred Mitchell,
Baseball Coach,
Harvard University.

Dear Fred:

Just came in from Brooks Hospital, atop Corey Hill, where your old pal and prize pupil, Charlie Devens, is convalescing after the removal of an unruly appendix.

There's no cause to be alarmed, Fred. "Hasty" never looked and says he never felt better in his life. (Maybe it's the night nurse he was telling us about.) He hopes to talk Dr. Tommy Richards into giving him his release before the end of the week and insists he'll be working out with the rest of the New York Yankees when training starts, March 5.

I was thinking, though, that you might send him a card of thanks for being considerate enough to wait until he became your first Cambridge protege to enter the majors before having his anatomy carved.

I shudder just visualizing the fix you would have been in had he decided upon the operation on the eve of any of the three seasons when he was your Crimson mound ace, if ,indeed, not your entire ball club.

You may well be proud of "Hasty," Mitch, even though he didn't string along with you by joining the Braves. In one year after leaving Harvard's classic halls, and with only 10 weeks of minor league experience, he established himself as one of the Yanks' mound mainstays. I can recall no faster jump from the campus to the majors.

And you may be interested to know that the young man expects to make you even prouder of him in the coming campaign.

"I'm certain this operation will increase my effectiveness," he told us. "The appendix had been bothering me for quite some time. It wasn't causing much pain, but it was upsetting my stomach badly. Some days out on the hill I felt as though my whole intestines were falling out. My mind would be a million miles away from the ball game and I'd become wild and erratic. It will be different in the future. I'll keep that plate always in sight and get the ball over it."

Which will be good news to you and Charlie's Harvard, Groton and Boston Blue Book friends, but will be very sad music to American League batters who must face him. The boy from Fair Harvard was considerably better than fair with his ailing appendix.

I have a strong hunch, Fred, that Devens' success has surprised even you, who taught him the rudiments of apple tossing. Otherwise, as business manager of the Braves, you would never have let him get away from Boston. He came high for a collegian, but he's already proved that he would have been cheap at twice the price that stopped the Tribal bidding.

I'll admit that the young man has amazed me.

"Pro ball is great fun," he observed, a wide grin on his pleasing countenance.

Said I to myself, said I, "He'll change his attitude and get that smile off his face or he won't last long in this racket."

But I was all wrong, Fred, all wrong.

That grin is more pronounced than ever as he lays on the hospital cot. And what does he think of pro ball now?

"It's great fun."

Did that go for Newark, too, where he spent the early months of last season?

Absolutely.

You'd know better than I, Fred, whether your former charge has succeeded because or in spite of this carefree attitude.

"Hasty," however, hasn't gone along without making some interesting observations, indicating that he takes the pastime more seriously than he appears to be on the surface.

He maintains that the jump from college to the majors is not much, if any, greater than the leap from the minors to the same heights.

"At least I learned very few new tricks and gained little experience in the bushes," he said.

"The failure of the average youngster to make good from the start in the big league can be traced to a mental hazard. He doubts that he has the stuff to hold his own in such classy company, tries too hard, and fails.

"A spell in the minors does help a rookie to overcome this handicap. Otherwise a college training is enough to carry him to the top, in my opinion.

"Of course he gains plenty of knowledge while under the big tent. A fellow like Herb Pennock could develop a wooden Indian into an ace in a week. He'll help the Red Sox plenty."

So you see, Fred, without mentioning your name, Charlie gives you the lion's share of the credit for his amazing rise in the baseball world.

Your pal from Harvard (Sq.)
Joe Cashman.

SPEAKING OF news. The referee for the Carnera-Loughran world's heavyweight championship bout at Miami, Fla., on February 22 will be picked five days before the match. And must have a Miami background, according to Francis Albertanti who is taking the sun at Miami Beach.

Mr. Boston

Col. John Reed Kilpatrick says he will sell 3,000 tickets for the title bout at $20. Now you tell 'e.

I have sat on the brim of the stadium in Miami, and you can see the action in the ring as well as you can from a front row seat. It is the best boxing arena in the world. And I have not overlooked the Garden Bowl in Long Island.

Amateur Boxing Interest

THE GROUP OF 143 youngsters at the opening class of the Boston Evening American's Boxing School at the Garden will be equalled by the second group that will report tonight.

Most of the youngsters who have already reported to the school carried their boxing togs wrapped up in old newspapers. They come from humble homes, and have splendid bodies, intelligence, and the desire to become champions.

When Jack Dempsey first hit New York, he was grateful when "Kid" Zizzle of Providence, who sold a racing newspaper on the Rockingham train last Summer bought him some ham and beans. Dempsey later earned $3,000,000 with his fists of iron.

Dr. G. Lynde Gately of East Boston will make frequent examinations of the boys to make certain they are in the best possible condition and do not overwork.

Malcewicz 34 Years Old

"PANTHER" JOE MALCEWICZ who meets Jim Londos at the Boston Garden tonight, is 34 years old. Londos is nearing the gay 40's, but won't admit how close he is to this mark. Like you and me.

Ed Don George is rapidly becoming as great a box office attraction in New York as Jim Browning who has the [illegible] of the mat salons in the Empire State. I would like to see Don and Jim shoot it out in a match which has not a time limit.

Billy Ames would like to match Werther Arcelli with either Billy Petrolle or Barney Ross. And Arcelli doesn't care which man is picked as his oponent. He feels he will win.

McCarthy After Risko

Judge Emil Fuchs told me he was afraid the fans would laugh at him if he told the real demands made by Cincinnati in the recent trade talk. The Judge says the Reds demanded Gyselman, Lee, a third player to be agreed upon, and $150,000 for "Chick" Hafey.

Boston contractors and workmen are rebuilding Fenway Park. And are getting fair prices for their efforts.

George Marshall sends word he will retain his control of the Boston Redskins despite his new duties as publisher of the Washington Times. Football is Marshall's pleasure. Pro football has scored in this city, and should have a large season next fall.

Jim Londos has earned $1,000,000 in wrestling purses. And wants it known he is an American citizen with his residence in St. Louis. Jim was born in Athens, Greece.

Los Angeles Cards $100,000 Handicap

Los Angeles, Jan. 24 (AP)—The richest purse known to horse racing, a $100,000 handicap, was promised today by the Los Angeles Turf Club through President Hal Roach for its inaugural running in 1935.

Roach said the race probably would be held in March on the track at Arcadia, recently authorized by the California Horse Racing Commission.

Skaters Frolic at Arena Tonight

Tonight, the Arena will be the Mecca of all winter sport fans with the Gala Skaters Frolic under the auspices of the Olympic Skating Club of Boston, scheduled to be held. The feature of the affair will be the selection of "Miss Olympic" who will be crowned Queen of the frolic.

Before and after the race events, general skating will be in order. Ben Levias heads the committee in charge.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Unless the Bruins give a better exhibition of hockey than they did against the Red Wings last night, the attendance will take another nose dive. With the exception of a spurt, after Nels Stewart's goal, the Bruins were listless and careless.

And, the Red Wings were not any too hot themselves, defensively. Ragged work by the Detroit defense while attempting to clear, put Wilfie Cude, their goal minder, on the spot during most of the last period.

Although he appreciated the fact that the game was well below the N. H. L. standard, James Norris, Jr., son of the Detroit owner, and Manager Jack Adams were perfectly satisfied with the result, for it was a four-point win.

As the Chicago Blackhawks were idle the Red Wings and Rangers advanced two points on the Gorman group and are now nine points up on the Bruins, who have only 19 games to make up their deficit.

Babe Siebert was injured in the third period, when he went down to check Gordon Pettinger. He attempted to stop the Red Wings with his arm, which was badly wrenched in the collision, forcing him to retire.

Peggy O'Neil has become a great favorite with the Bruins fans and when he did not make an appearance, the crowd began to yell, "We want Peggy O'Neil." He's a hustling fearless kid and is playing great hockey.

Earl Roche, who was the top scorer until "Chuck" Conacher started his spurt, has been let out by Ottawa and is now playing for the Detroit Olympics of the International League.

With "Chuck" Conacher, Joe Primeau and "Busher" Jackson setting the pace, the Toronto Maple Leafs have scored 110 goals in 29 games. Conacher, Primeau and Jackson are leading for individual honors in the order named, Chuck with 33 points, Joe 28, and the Busher 25.

Big Nels Stewart worked like a Trojan to bring the Bruins through to a victory. If the Bruins were winning their share of games, Stewart would be one of the most popular players that has ever worn a Boston uniform, for he gives everything he has to keep his team in the race.

During the second period, Marty Barry accidentally hit Wilfie Cude in the face with his stick as he was trying to connect with a pass out from behind the Detroit net. Cude was taken to the dressing room for repairs and as soon as he re-appeared, Capt. Barry skated over and apologized.

One of the smartest plays seen at the Garden this season was the Weiland-Lewis combination, for the second Red Wing goal. Cooney had the puck at the Boston blue line and just as Lewis crossed over, he passed the disc behind him and Lewis, going at top speed picked it up and was inside the Boston defense before anyone knew where he or the puck was. It was a great play and proved to be the winning goal.

Lionel Hitchman was used at right defense during the few minutes he was in action. If, as rumor has it, the Bruins are trying to make a trade for Hitchman, Detroit will talk turkey, for Manager Jack Adams believes that "Hitch" would round out a leak in his defense.

B. C. May Place Ban on Benedict Fleet

By WALTER KILEY

Fleet, whose secret marriage to Muriel A. Victor of [illegible] on Dec. 16, 1933 at Dover N. H. was made known yesterday, faces a possible expulsion from University Heights.

It is not so much the matter of the marriage itself, for marriage under ordinary circumstances is permissible under the Boston College code, but the [illegible] of being married by a justice of the peace, which raises the problem as to the Gloucester star's future.

No action on the case will be taken by Boston College [illegible] after the return from New York of President Fr. Gallagher, which is expected either late tonight or early tomorrow morning.

FLEET STAR PERFORMER

Neither John P. Curley, graduate manager of athletics, nor Rev. Francis McHugh, dean of studies could comment authoritatively on the attitude of Heights authorities.

"Fr. Gallagher is the sole authority in such instances," they stated, "and nothing can be said or done until his careful study of the facts of the case."

In the meanwhile, Coach Jack Ryder's hopes of a successful track season are [illegible] dispelled, for in Fleet he possesses a quarter and half miler who was expected to be one of the outstanding college runners of the year.

It was on Fleet that Ryder was depending for the [illegible] defense of the [illegible] two mile [illegible] championship at the Prout Games in Boston Garden on Saturday night.

Fleet was to [illegible] in the mile and two mile relays, running anchor on each of them.

PURSUED BY JINX

This latest development in Fleet's collegiate career is just another of a long list of events which has prevented him from reaching the great promise which he showed as a freshman.

An operation for an abscess kept him out of competition last year. Ryder, however, felt certain that he would be in the best form of his career this winter and spring season and perhaps surpass the records held by Jake Driscoll, former Eagle star runner, some years ago.

COLLINS TO STAND PAT ON SOX

PRESENT TEAM CAPABLE OF WINNING BALL

By JOE CASHMAN

Eddie Collins is satisfied with his Red Sox club as it now stands. He has no trades in mind and will make no attempt to engineer any before the season starts.

Only if a rival club submits a proposition that looks too good to be turned down will there be any change in the Fenway flock between now and April 17, the day the barrier lifts.

This information comes straight from the Sox general manager, thus spiking the rumor that he is in the market for Tony Lazzeri of the Yanks and exploding the theory that news of importance might arrive in town with President Tom Yawkey today.

"The Red Sox are not one of the five or six clubs that, according to Ed Barrow, are after Lazzeri," Eddie declared upon returning from a 10-day trip, which took him South to sign up Herb Pennock and present terms for a working agreement with the Winston-Salem club of the Piedmont League.

LAZZERI OR NOTHING

"I have never sought Lazzeri, though I wouldn't object to having him on our club. Before the winter meeting, Barrow tried to palm off some of his second-class infielders on me. I silenced him by declaring the only Yankee infielder I would be interested in would be 'Push 'em up.'

"If he wants to consider that an offer, well and good. I don't.

"I'm not trying to get any player from any club. I'm satisfied we can win with our present roster. There have been reports that some of the players we've bought of late were secured to be used in trades. That's not true. I plan no more trading.

"If I do make a deal, you can rest assured the impetus will come from the other club. Naturally if I'm made an offer that seems certain to strengthen the Sox, I will accept. But if there are any Santa Clauses in this circuit, I've missed making their acquaintance."

President Tom Yawkey was scheduled to arrive with Collins but he was detained in New York at the last moment. He will get in today.

ABSENT SINCE NOVEMBER

The one and only purpose of his visit is to see for himself how the job of reconstructing his ball park is progressing. He hasn't seen the place since November.

"The boss will have little to say unless it be to recount a few hunting stories," predicted Eddie. "Incidently, I hope he has enough yarns to keep you guys off my ear for a day or two. I'm up to my neck in work.

"Remember, this off-season toil is all new to me. I'm used to loafing from October to March. But I wouldn't trade jobs with the Prince of Wales."

Eddie is delighted over acquiring Herb Pennock. He expects the veteran southpaw to win his share of games for the Sox but adds that if Herbie doesn't turn in a victory, he'll prove invaluable in developing young pitchers.

WILD LEROY IS BACK IN FOLD

New York, Jan. 24—Continuing its custom of daily announcements on the contract situation, the New York Giants, World's Champions, announced today the signing of Leroy Parmelee, right hand pitcher, for 1934. Parmelee hails rom Lambertville, Mich., but it might have been Borneo, if his record for wildness can be taken at face value.

Possessor of one of the sharpest curve balls in baseball, he failed to figure in the last World' Series between the Giants and Senators because it was deemed inadvisable to turn him loose against the Washington hitters.

His record of hit batsmen during the late months of the race was responsible for this decision, it was said. Randy Moore, of the Braves, and Stanley Hack, of the Cubs, sustaining a broken wrist and broken finger respectively from too intimate a contact with Parmelee's curve. George Watkins, of the Cardinals, also was struck on the wrist late in the season.

Thrills in Sports

"Uncle Will" Petrolle Is Most Amazing and Versatile Young Man—

Well, Maybe Not As Young — But Ross May Wish He Was Older.

By Jack Kofoed

Mr. McLarnin was not used to that sort of treatment. He arose, but from that point on was not the devastating fighter New York audiences had become accustomed to seeing. Petrolle won with plenty to spare.

I think that was as fine a battle as "Uncle Will" ever showed us . . . and he has produced some pips. Beating Jimmy McLarnin was considered a pretty nearly impossible task in those days, but the old man in the Navajo blanket showed that even the impossible held no terrors for him.

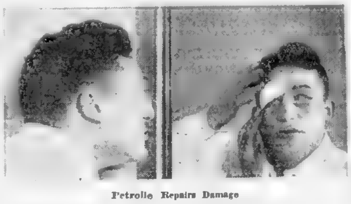
Tonight Uncle Will is faced with the task of beating Barney Ross, the lightweight champion, for the benefit of the New York American-Jornal Milk Fund. They are going to fight at the Coliseum, so far up in the Bronx that you'd think it was South Albany . . . but will gross thirty thousand dollars at the gate.

Madison Square Garden seems to think boxing is no more than a financial by-product . . . but it is a by-product only when bad matches are made. Such bouts as this Petrolle-Ross one will bring the customers any night, rainy or moonlit. Boxing still has a tight grip on the affections of sportsmen . . . but it is an affection that can be nurtured or starved according to the fare that is doled out.

To my way of thinking Uncle Will Petrolle is one of the most amazing men in the hard boiled racket he graces so well. Some years ago the chap they call "the Fargo Express" was all washed up. He was even convinced of it himself, and retired to the seclusion of his home, thenceforth to live . . . as he thought . . . the quiet life of a small townsman.

When a chap is used to travelling around the country, fighting here and there, he can't get used to such an existence. Uncle Will was never one of your prima donnas. He was always ready to trade leather.

Why, when he was on his honeymoon in New York, he went to a movie one night with his bride, after packing away a large spaghetti dinner. In the meantime his manager, Jack Hurley, was being frantically sought by a promoter who had Ruby Goldstein booked with Johnny Cecolli.



Petrolle Repairs Damage

Ruby hadn't showed up . . . and as there were beaucoup shekels in the house, the promotor naturally didn't want to give them back. However, he had to get a substitute if he was to keep possession . . . and naturally he thought of Petrolle first thing.

Uncle Will was all comfy in the movie, but he said sure, for fifteen hundred dollars he'd do almost anything. So he left his bride for a couple of hours, and knocked Johnny stiffer than a frozen mackerel. That was very typical of the old Fargo Express. He is the fightinest man I know.

What I started to say was that Petrolle couldnt stand domesticity. He spent a good many hours a day around Hurley's gymnasium . . . and naturally boxed with the boys. It would be hard to imagine Uncle Will without gloves on, anyway. He seemed to be getting back some of his old stuff . . . and suddenly told Jack that he'd like to take another shot at the old game.

He did, too . . . and licked quite a few people, including Tony Canzoneri and Jimmy McLarnin. There he was back with both feet . . . and has been ever since.

Tonight Uncle Will Faces Ross

Now, about that fight tonight. Uncle Will, as has been announced in the public prints, is scheduled to meet Barney Ross, who happens to be lightweight champion of the world. Mr. Ross, according to the press agents, has cast aspersions on Petrolle, because Will never held a championship. Barney, I should say, would be most unwise if he permitted that fact to convince him that the Fargo Express is none too good. The Express is much tougher . . . much smarter . . . and a better puncher than many a chap whose brow his been decorated with the laurel wreath of a championship. If Barney isn't sure about that now he may know more about it around 11 o'clock this evening.

Personally I have nothing against Bernard Ratofsky, which I understand is the lightweight title holder's real name, but my sentimental inclinations fall toward Uncle Will Petrolle. Uncle Will doesn't mind the honorable scars. He may even reap a few more before he finally hangs up the gloves. He loves to fight . . . and a guy can't fight without getting smacked around more or less.

Of course, the time is coming very shortly when the old Fargo Express will be shunted off to the roundhouse. Just what the veteran will do then I haven't the least idea. He couldn't take a dose of retirement before . . . and will probably have a tough time when he tries it again.

I'm Not Sorry for Old Veterans

However, I've gotten tired of being sorry for old veterans. I moaned over Tommy Loughran three years ago . . . and Tom has fought himself into a match with Primo Carnera for the heavyweight championship. I was deeply distressed over the fact that Johnny Risko was getting boffed around . . . and John keeps on licking pretty good men whenever he works himself into the proper frame of mind. So I'm not going to cry over the sad fate of Billy Petrolle.

It may be that he will give Barney Ross a shellacking . . . and I hope he does on general principles, and because I like Uncle Will. But even if he fails . . . and even if he has to go back to the quiet provincialism of Fargo, North Dakota, I know a lot of fellows who would like to trade places with him.

He has made a success of his career . . . and has nothing to worry about in the future . . . which is more than most of us can say, at any rate.

At 40 Johnny Dundee Seeks Competition

Miami, Fla., Jan. 24—Ponce De Leon never did find that fountain of youth up St. Augustine way, but then he didn't have the pertinacity of Johnny Dundee, former featherweight champion, who after twenty-four years in boxing is down here looking for a fight.

And, according to his statement today, he's ready to meet "any man selected bar none."

Right or wrong, Dundee still feels that he can carry the pace with any of the good ones—although not so long ago an unfeeling commission in New York tried to dissuade him.

Off the records, Johnny is at least 40, but—

"I had the gloves on only three months ago and beat a promising youngster named Nickey Greb at Orange, N. J.," Dundee said today. "I made him look silly."

So the veteran champion, who started away back in 1910, is still at it—any time they'll let him—and eternally clamoring for more. Most of the good ones he fought, the Leonards, the Kilbanes, etc., are gone long since. Only Dundee remains active. For two years he has worked out daily in a gymnasium and thinks that he's almost as good as ever.

CHELSEA FIVE ONE OF BEST IN STATE

By BILL CONNELL

A policy of light work in two practice sessions a week has hurled the Chelsea High court team along the victory trail this season. The campaign rounds out 10 years court teaching at Chelsea for Bill Kennelly, whose unusual training system once more has made the school team one of the better fives of the state.

Its eighth straight win of the year came as Chelsea topped hitherto undefeated [illegible] Tech, 29 to 21, last night. The conquest once again proved the quality of Kennelly's work.

"Too much training robs boys of their natural enthusiasm and speed," says Kennelly. "My system is to drill the squad only on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, once the early season work is completed.

"On the two afternoons we hold practice the players get only about 10 minutes scrimmaging, with the remainder of the period devoted to perfecting plays, and working for accurate shooting."

COMPETITION BEST

Kennelly believes the actual competition teaches boys more than any practice tests once the fundamentals are mastered. His charges are unusually quick to adopt new methods or take advantage of instruction, according to the coach.

This season he has height and heft, and speed as well to make the team powerful. Manny Abrams, left forward, is only 5-7, but center Bob Hanson stands 6-1. Sol Mechter, right forward, is an even six feet. Steve Stavisky, left guard, six feet. Nate Saltzman, right guard, 6-2.

Mechten is the standout of this five, the varsity team. Ranks with the ace courtmen of recent years, with his speed, fine dribbling, passing and shooting.

The second five of the squad also is rated as varsity material. "Si" Rosenthal and Jacob Flutsky, forwards; Tom Lake, center; John Molloy and Arigo LaTanzi, guards, form a fast team. Several of these are specialists used at intervals. LaTanzi, for example, is a brilliant defensive player, and when his team is leading is a very valuable cog.

23 BOYS IN SQUAD

There are 23 boys on the group, with 10 sophomores, who play all the second team games, and provide a constant string of players coming up to the varsity each year.

The Chelsea teams have constantly been winners during Kennelly's regime. This year's team is one of the State's best school fives. The gym is crammed to its 800 fans capacity for each game. Present plans call for enlarging the gym or moving to another site, so that at least 1000 spectators may be accommodated.

A money-making basketball team. Uncommon, these times. But there it is! It shows what good coaching and fast, smart play can accomplish in keeping a school sport out of the red ink.

'PURES' SHOW FOR IRAMERKS

An amateur welterweight of considerable promise will be among those showing his wares in the Irish-American boxing bouts at 390 Broadway, South Boston, tomorrow night.

He is James Garrett, who has been steadily forging to the front in amateur tournies this season. Paul Shute and Ed Smith, who stole the show in their heavyweight final a week ago, are again entered and will probably meet in the finals of that division again this week.

WORK MORE, EARN MORE, SPEND MORE IN 1934

FRIENDS WANT M'CORMACK IN STATE RACE

W[illegible], Jan. 24 (INS)—[illegible] interest [illegible] the [illegible] political situation in Massachusetts, have come to the conclusion that the views of three men will do most to clarify the gubernatorial picture.

These are Gov. Ely and Rep. John W. McCormack, Democrats, and former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller, Republican. Ely has said persistently he would retire at the conclusion of his present term, but his repeated statements have failed to alter the conviction entertained by many that he may let be persuaded to make a third campaign.

PRESSURE ON McCORMACK

A number of Democrats are mentioned as likely candidates for the governorship if Ely does retire, outstanding among whom are Joseph W. Bartlett, suggested by Ely, State Treasurer Charles L. Hurley and Rep. William J. Granfield of Springfield.

Meanwhile, pressure is being brought to bear on McCormack to go after the gubernatorial nomination, but the Boston congressman has given no hint of his plans.

Whether he runs or not, however, his friends contend he will have considerable influence in determining the ultimate candidate.

On the Republican side, party members here regard Fuller as the dark horse of their gubernatorial primary. With Lieut.-Gov. Bacon already an announced candidate for governor, Bay State Republicans here believe Fuller, if he should decide to oppose Bacon, would make no effort to obtain the endorsement of the pre-primary itself.

NAVY YARDS ASSURED

Representatives from navy yard districts are seen less frequently at the White House and navy department since the administration's naval building program was launched. Until recently trips of the New England delegation to the White House, either to oppose proposals to close their yards, or to ask more for them, were frequent. Such trips are no longer necessary.

The Rhode Island representatives are particularly pleased with the announcement by the navy department that a large section of the Atlantic fleet will be back in Newport harbor this summer, although he saw a possibility the committee might be called to consider it.

PURE SEXTETS IN TWIN BILL

Two good amateur hockey games are listed for the Arena ice this week. In a twin bill Friday night the Olympics meet the Union Boat Club six, and the North Cambridge Club opposes the University City six.

Olympics, with wins over Harvard and Dartmouth and an overtime tie with Yale, are in a class by themselves in amateur hockey this season.

Indications are that the railroads will have further good news this week. The New Haven is reported doing well. New York Central traffic is said to be running ahead of last week and a year ago. Pere Marquette and North Western are other carriers reporting traffic gains.

Matthew C. Brush, former head of the Boston Elevated, known as one of Wall Street's "Big Ten" during the so-called Coolidge bull market, has resigned as a director of the Boston Elevated. President Joseph H. Soliday of the Franklin Savings Bank has been appointed a director to take his place.

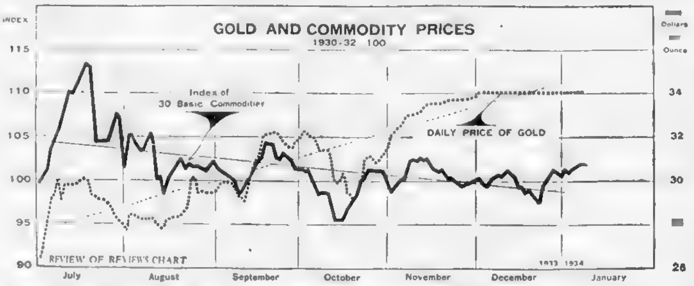
Gold Plan Called Deep Disappointment



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Review of Reviews

In spite of assurances to the contrary from high administration sources and a restatement of faith by Prof Warren at the recent session of the American Economic Association the fact remains that the gold-buying policy of the government has not met expectations. In fact, to put the matter bluntly, it has been a deep disappointment particularly to groups affected with [illegible] which had looked to the gold movement for relief.

There was a time in the fall when the gold theory of Prof Warren seemed to find striking market confirmation. It may be noted that the price of basic commodities as determined in the Review of Reviews index and the daily price of gold moved together. The decline in the price of gold in October was accompanied by a corresponding decline in the commodity index.

Thereafter, however, the correlation between these two series is not all that had been hoped for. The price of gold was raised to $34.06 an ounce, but the line of commodity prices seems to have been unaffected.

If we were to draw a rough trend line through gold for this six months period we would find a strongly rising slope. A similar rough trend through the commodity index would reveal a declining trend. In all fairness it must be conceded that the period is too brief to subject the gold theory to definite test. Nevertheless the evidence to date does not give it strong support.

NEW CHRYSLERS 'RIDE ON AIR'

By JOSEPH W. FRASER
General Sales Manager Chrysler Sales Corporation

It is obvious that the manufacturer who best anticipates what the public wants in a motor car and best supplies these things at a price within reach of the buyers constituting his potential market is going to sell the most cars. With this thought in mind, the Chrysler engineers started five years ago to design the Airflow Chrysler of 1934.

J. W. Fraser

There are several major premises that we of the sales department could furnish the engineers as a result of our experience. The first and most important of these was the demand for a better riding quality, following in order safety, comfort, good appearance and economy.

To achieve the dynamic balance, all of the important weights of the car were redistributed. The engine is over the front axle and the rear seat is 20 inches in front of the rear axle. The passengers, in either seat, are placed at points where there is the least motion.

Live News of Active Leaders in Wall St.

NUMEROUS new highs were set by leading shares on the "Big Board" today. Among the leaders were General Motors du Pont, Allied Chemical Industries, Rayon, American Can and Johns-Manville.

Ward and Sears Are Favored in Chicago

Chicago is buying Montgomery Ward and says Sears Roebuck is "behind" the market. There is accumulating bullish sentiment on aviation stocks and there is much talk of replacements and large government orders in the offing.

Norfolk & Western Blue Ribbon Line

In 1933, as in previous years, Norfolk & Western held its position as the blue ribbon railroad. The big soft coal carrier last year earned net income equal to $15.20 a share on the 1,406,483 common shares or $7.20 a share more than it paid out in dividends. In the two years of 1932 and 1933, both of them poor railroad years, Norfolk earned $26.50 a share and paid out in dividends only $17 a share. In other words, net income of the road for the common in two bad railroad years exceeded dividend payments on the stock by a total of $13,381,[illegible]88.

Industrial Rayon Profits Increase

One reason for buying of Industrial Rayon appeared today. It was issuance of the consolidated balance sheet of Industrial Rayon Corp and subsidiary as of Dec 31 1933 certified by independent auditors showing current assets totaled $9,731,563 and current liabilities $1,048,241, against $5,525,288 and $640,048 respectively at close of 1932. On Dec. 31, 1933, cash amounted to $481,833 and United States government securities carried at par value $7,500,000, against cash of $384,403 and United States government securities at cost, of $3,561,420 on Dec 31, 1932.

Cotton Higher in New York Dealings

New York, Jan. 24 (INS)—Cotton futures extended yesterday's recovery movement in today's session, the list running up more than 25 cents a bale on a moderately heavy demand from scattered sources.

Late quotations were up 3 to 5 points, with March up 3 at 11.17, May up 5 at 11.33; July up 6 at 11.49, and October up 3 at 11.62.

Closing on London Exchange Is Steady

London, Jan. 24—Stocks closed steady on the exchange here today. Oil, copper and trans-Atlantic shares were favorably influenced by America advices. Mining shares were easy. Paris finished steady and Berlin lower.

BOSTON STOCKS ARE HIGHER

Trend of leading shares was upward in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Changes ranged from fractions to more than a point on the upside. Utah Metals was again a feature rising around a point to a new high on the movement.

Rail issues were strong with Atchison, Boston & Maine B stamped and New Haven showing gains of a point or better. Pennsylvania was a major fraction higher.

United Shoe issues were firm with both the common and preferred showing slight gains. Textile issues displayed a better tone with Pacific Mills and Amoskeag showing moderate improvement.

Atlas Corporation, Eastern Steamship and United Fruit were a point or more higher. Gillette, General Electric, Kennecott and Pond Creek Pocahontas were fractionally improved.

State St. Traders Feel Price Trend Continues Upward

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The ease with which the market picks up speed when quotations show a tendency to rise convinces traders that the trend remains upward. While sudden sinking spells are expected they will hardly be feared. Rather will the speculative fraternity look on reactions as opportunities to expand present commitments on the long side. As yet there is no indication profits are likely to be taken on a large scale.

The support levels noted here yesterday for the hourly averages continue to be the important spots to watch on the downside. Despite the widespread talk of a correction we do not think it likely they will be broken. With prices lying just under the highs of last summer it is more than possible a [illegible] upward movement will require a severe technical correction.

GOLD SHARES ARE BOUGHT

London reports that large amounts of gold have been bought in the open market for U. S. accounts, spurred buying of the shares of domestic producers. For the most part leading gold issues are in for a gala year. Earnings are expected to be sharply higher in 1934. This encourages many to make purchases at current levels in the belief prices do not reflect the exact improvement.

Notes—Talk behind the strength in Schenley is that earnings will run about $1 per share per month for 1934 . . . St. Joseph Lead is said to be well taken . . . This company is pushing sales to paintmakers and meeting with success, we hear . . . Celanese is tipped here and there . . . We understand it may have a last burst up around 45-47 . . . We would not follow it.

Late buyers are concentrating their attention on issues they consider behind the rest of the market. Here a few with nearby objective prices: International Harvester 45, Air Reduction 110, Texas Corp. 29, and United Aircraft 36. They are being bought on dips now with follow up buying scheduled for the first dip after the prices noted are made.

Westinghouse in making 43 touched an objective figure comparable to those set forth above. As we get it good buying put it there and any easiness from that figure will encounter plenty more of the same sort. Pennsylvania electrification should help to keep the wolf away from its corporate door in 1934.

PROMPT ACTION IS FAVORED IN EMERGENCIES

Haney Believes in Fighting Unsound Proposals

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Jan. 24—One of the most common sayings these days is "We must get behind the President." The prevailing idea is that criticism is harmful, and that all we can do is to follow the leader.

It should be helpful to consider this point frankly.

Lewis Haney

In part I am in agreement. It seems to me, however, that there are modifying considerations.

One is this: the President is a great politician, and as such he desires to get in front of the popular majority. He is not going to lead an unpopular cause. If enough of us express our views in criticism of NRA oppressions or in favor of government economy he will get in front of us, and then we will be behind him!

I believe in fighting proposed measures which I believe to be unsound as long as they are not law and there is a chance of defeating them.

I also believe most thoroughly that we should keep the "emergency measures more separate from the social reforms." Much may be done to meet financial emergencies and relieve immediate distress which we might not want to do as a permanent policy. Criticism may make this point effective.

I think we should deal with current exigencies promptly, but should go slow and debate well, policies which will affect us all our lives and our children after us. Once a law designed to deal with an emergency has passed, about all one can do is to make the best of it.

But no law has been passed establishing a "commodity dollar," or a government bank, or price fixing and monopoly. As a good Democrat, therefore, I will oppose these things.

So now is the time to understand what the New Deal means and to adjust ourselves to it, insofar as it is made effective and as much as we possibly can.

MODERATE RISE IS REGISTERED BY LEADERS

New York, Jan. 24—A number of stock groups were brought forward today in active buying on the New York Stock Exchange, but gains were moderate.

Rails were in demand all day, but motors, steels, tobaccos and various specialties experienced periodic favor. Metals and alcohols were quiet. The late tone was fairly firm.

Issues up a point or more in the last hour included Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Santa Fe, New York Central, Liggett & Myers B, and Electric Autolite. American Telephone was steady.

In the first hour scattered issues showed gains of 2 or more points in active trading. Advances of 2 points or better appeared for Air Reduction, Atlantic Coast Line and Crown Cork & Seal. Worthington Pump issues were strong with the common gaining over a point, while the B shares soared more than 4 points.

Carrier issues showing gains of a point or better included Atchison, New York Central, Delaware & Hudson and Lackawanna. American Agricultural Chemical, American Can, American Sugar, Corn Products, Goodyear and Industrial Rayon all added a point or more.

Low priced shares reviewed considerable attention during the second hour, particularly amusement shares. Changes otherwise were narrow. Columbian Carbon was around 2 points higher by noon. Johns-Manville was firm.

U. S. bond trading was quiet and steady following the Treasury's announcement of a billion dollar offering of notes and certificates of indebtedness. Railroad and foreign government liens showed strength.

Rails were given another upturn in the third hour. Norfolk & Western showed a gain of almost 3 points. Bangor & Aroostook, New Haven and Baltimore & Ohio were a point or so higher. Continental Baking A was up over 2 points. Industrial Rayon extended its gain to 3 points.

Brooklyn Union Gas, Chrysler, American Hawaiian, General Electric, Pacific Mills, National Cash Register, People's Gas and Macy were up 1 to 2 or more points. U. S. Steel held fractionally higher.

In the fourth hour the leaders mostly rested, while market activity revolved around advances in less conspicuous stocks. U. S. Steel was churned around at fractional advances. Gains of two or more points were held by Chesapeake Corp. and Columbia Carbon.

Point or better gains showed for Westinghouse, Worthington, Goodyear, General Electric, Atchison, National Cash Register, Baltimore & Ohio, Baldwin, Case, Chrysler, American Water Works and Allis-Chalmers.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 2,560,000 shares.

Boston Wool Mart Price Trend Upward

"A few inquiries are being received on medium fleeces but sales are very slow as holders are not inclined to accept bids which are below the maximum prices received on the last sales of sizable volume," says the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. "Some houses are asking higher prices than the range 42-43c in the grease, which has prevailed for several weeks on strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood, Ohio and similar fleeces."

Sagamore Is Paying Increased Dividend

Sagamore Mfg. Co., Fall River cotton goods mills, declared a dividend of $1 per share, payable Feb. 1 to stock of record Jan. 23. Last previous dividend was 50 cents a share, paid on Nov. 1, prior to which last dividend had been one of $1 in May, 1932. For 1933 the company reported net earnings of $123,000, equal to $4.10 per share on the 30,000 shares of stock.

Gain in Building Contracts Is Seen

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—L. Seth Schnitmann, chief statistician for F. W. Dodge Corp., today reported an indicated widespread construction improvement throughout the country with contracts for the first half of January exceeding those of the full month of January, 1933.

Extra Dividend Is Paid by Tobacco

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—Directors of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. today declared an extra dividend of $1 and the regular quarterly dividend of the same amount on the common and common "B" stocks, both payable March 1. A year ago similar extras were paid.

Central Loadings Above a Year Ago

New York, Jan. 24 (AP)—New York Central's freight loadings last week totaled 92,490 cars compared with 92,804 in the previous week and 82,164 a year ago. The increase over 1933 is 12.6 per cent.

FOURTH DEGREE -:- By K. S. Daiger

Truth Test Reveals Man With Whining Voice Was Prowling in Cellar of Paige House

It had been arranged that Captain of Detectives Charles D Winslow was to conduct the truth serum test on Tim Stokes, since Anderson was in no condition to do it himself. Two stenographers, notebooks in hand, drew their chairs up close beside the bed where they could catch every word.

"Make your questions very short," said Dr. Dandy. "If you don't, he will answer the last part and forget to answer the first. Keep them short and very direct."

The answer came without hesitation yet, although the voice was low and throaty, it was quite clear.

"Timothy James Stokes."

"Where were you born?"

"In New York City."

"Tim, where were you on last Monday night? Can you remember?"

"Sure I can. That was the night Tilly and me planned to get the jewel."

"Did you plan to go to Mrs. Paige's house?"

"Yep. We went there. I met Tilly outside the house about 8 o'clock. She left a window open. We went in that."

"Sat in the cellar waiting for some people to go."

"Who were these people?"

"What did you do in the cellar?"

"Smoked. Some cigarettes that Tilly brought. Smoked a whole package."

"Did you go upstairs to either the first or second floors?"

"Nope."

"Not at any time?"

"Nope."

"Why not?"

"We never got no chance. Always somebody moving about up there."

"But you came to steal the pearl, didn't you?"

"That's right."

VOICE NOT FORGOTTEN

"Did Tilly's madam and her friend go away?"

"Yes, after a long time. It was cold there," and Tim shivered even in his unconsciousness.

"Why didn't you go upstairs then?"

"Door-bell rang."

"Who was it?"

"I don't know. A man with a funny whining voice."

"Would you know it if you heard it again?"

"Who answered the bell?"

"The lady. Came running downstairs."

"What did she say?"

"We couldn't hear. Just voices over our head."

"But you just said you heard the man's voice. How's that?"

"He spoke louder. But we didn't hear any words—just the sound of him talking."

"Then what happened?"

They went upstairs and stayed a long time. Then the man came running downstairs."

"Why did he come down?"

"We heard an automobile coming up the drive and somebody put a key in the hall door."

"What did he do?"

"He made for the cellar, opened the door at the top of the steps, lit a match and came on down."

"Did he turn on the lights in the cellar?"

"Nope."

"What did he look like?"

"Tall—dark. I don't know. He kept the match well down in his hands."

"What did he do in the cellar?"

"Went up to the electric bulb in a light on the other side of the cellar. Put his hand up. Guess he was trying to turn on the light."

"Did he succeed?"

FRONT DOOR OPENS

"Then what happened?"

"We heard the front door open and the man beat it for the window which Tilly and I had left open and went through it."

"Just a couple o' seconds."

"What did you do?"

"We hid there and heard the gentleman go upstairs. Then there was a terrible scream and we heard him come running down again to the library. We heard him cry 'Get me Towson police quick! Somebody's killed my wife!'"

Here Tim began to breath very hard and it was clear that he was experiencing acute agitation. Dr. Dandy immediately administered another injection of scopolamin and he quieted down.

"What did you do then?"

"Tilly and me beat it as quick as possible out the window."

The answers to all of these questions had been prompt and business-like—not at all like a man seeking to evdde the truth but anxious rather to give the shortest and most direct replies.

Captain Winslow continued. But now his voice lost its smooth monotone and became sharp. It was clear that he cared little for the "fourth degree."

"Stokes, what happened was really this: you and Tilly went upstairs after the jewel, didn't you?"

"And you gaged Mrs. Paige while you tried to find it?"

"No, so help me God! Tilly and me never set foot upstairs!"

"And when you found that you had killed her, you strung her up to the chandelier, didn't you?"

"No, that's not true. I never even seen Mrs. Paige."

And so it went on for another hour. Captain Winslow, wearying, was replaced by Detective Hurley who went all over the questions again. But he received the same answers.

Then Assistant-Inspector McCauley tried but with no better success.

When the examination had lasted for three hours and 45 minutes, Inspector Anderson held up his hand.

"I think we've had enough," he said. "Stokes either can't or won't tell us anything more. Doctor, I want to thank you very much for coming down here. The experiment has been most interesting."

Then Anderson signalled to the Commissioner and the two went over to one corner of the room where they talked in undertones for a few minutes.

NEW MYSTERY COMES

"The Commissioner and I feel," he began, "that although this has been a most interesting experiment, it has been, nevertheless, nothing more than an experiment. Scopolamin is still too much in its infancy for us to regard it as an infallible test. Later it may be better developed.

"In spite of Stokes' negative reaction to the test, both the Commissioner and I think that the case will have to go to a jury for a final decision. And so I hereby charge Stokes with the wilful and intentional murder of Sonia Paige!"

"I also want to say," he stated, "that we shall release Mrs. Deane at once. Mr. Paige and Mr. Cleveland, I want to apologize to you both for any embarrassment we have caused you in the course of this investigation. I am convinced that neither of you know any more than you have already said.

"Mr. Paige, I shall order the guard withdrawn from your home at once, but I suggest that you do not return there until tomorrow morning."

ONE CLUE NEGLECTED

Anderson beckoned to me and we walked over to the window looking down on Fayette st. He was smiling a little and watching me quizzically.

"Andy!" I blurted out. "You overlooked something in Tim's story. Did you get that part about the man in the cellar trying to turn on the electric light? He never told us that' before—guess he forgot it or thought it wasn't important. But do you realize what that really means? If there was another man, his finger-prints must be on that coal-dusted bulb? Not a soul has been down in that cellar since you and Carroll and I were there and we didn't turn on the lights; used your flash, you remember. Why, man, it's the clue of a lifetime."

My words actually tripped over themselves so anxious was I to get them out.

"And you'd forgotten that I used to be a finger-print expert, didn't you, Kay?" Still smiling that quiet bantering smile.

"I didn't think you'd noticed,' I said in confusion.

"Then why did you think that I released all of our suspects and ordered the guard away from the house tonight?"

"I most certainly shall do nothing of the kind," answered Anderson with decision. "Kay, my boy, you may in time develop into a good reporter but you'll never make even a poor detective. Don't you see for yourself that there is only one way for us to solve this murder? The two persons whom we have suspected were at the examination this afternoon, going on the presumption that Stokes' story is true. I mean Robert Cleveland and Randolph Paige. Mrs. Deane I am leaving out of the picture for unless we can secure fresh evidence against her we have no case where she is concerned. Of the two men, I have never been dead sure. Both of them heard Tim Stokes' yarn. If either of them is guilty, he has left behind him a fatal clue in the shape of that electric bulb. What is he likely to do under the circumstances?"

"Go after it, you mean?"

LAST GOOD CHANCE

"Certainly. He will believe that all suspicion has been diverted from himself—that's why I accused Stokes of the murder—and that we have abandoned our investigation. He knows that upon this night alone there will be no one in the Paige house. Some time after dark and before morning, he will go into the cellar and put a fresh electric bulb in that socket."

"And we'll be there to nab him," I exclaimed with enthusiasm.

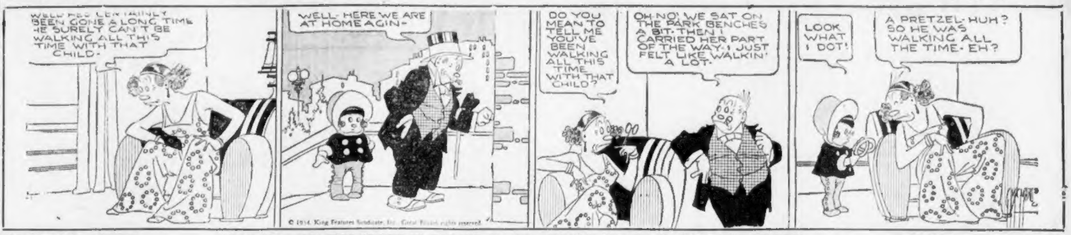
Picking Up a Clue



WELL HE'S CERTAINLY BEEN GONE A LONG TIME HE SURELY CAN'T BE WALKING ALL THIS TIME WITH THAT CHILD-
WELL- HERE WE ARE AT HOME AGIN-
DO YOU MEAN TO TELL ME YOU'VE BEEN WALKING ALL THIS TIME WITH THAT CHILD?
OH-NO! WE SAT ON THE PARK BENCHES A BIT- THEN I CARRIED HER PART OF THE WAY- I JUST FELT LIKE WALKIN' A LOT-
LOOK WHAT I DOT!
A PRETZEL- HUH? SO HE WAS WALKING ALL THE TIME- EH?

Once-Overs

Probably you often have thought that you would like to be in a financial position sufficiently strong for you to disregard public opinion.

You have an idea that the possession of much money wins any place you seek, no matter what you say or do.

Peace and comfort would be denied you.

To feel that friends are dependent upon the position you occupy and the kind of amusement you furnish, the entertainment you give, is not satisfying.

Thousands of people with money get less joy out of life than those in more humble positions, surrounded by those who are attracted by their individual selves.

A Run-Off Primary

A run-off primary for election of the Mayor of Boston has now been proposed by a special Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature which has again been studying the city charter.

The Boston City charter for nearly a quarter of a century has been a political football. It has been amended, altered, revised, codified and doctored like the hospital patient who, when told that his appendix must be removed, said to the doctors, "Go ahead; if you can find room to cut." The city of Boston has become increasingly Democratic through the years, and the Republican majority of officeholders in the Legislature has done its utmost to stifle the majority Democratic citizens of Boston.

There ought to be either a run-off primary or a return to the party system of Mayoralty elections in Boston, it is true. The field of Mayoralty candidates ought to be limited in order that the issues of clean government may be less confusing. The recent election was a whirligig. Mayor Mansfield fortunately emerged as a minority choice. By a narrow squeak, his victory frustrated the design of the Boston Republican ring to capture the city again by dividing, confusing and bewildering the majority Democrats.

Four of the eight members of this special Committee of the Legislature mustered enough courage to recommend that the Mayor instead of the Governor be allowed to appoint the Boston License Commission and three members had enough fundamental democracy in their systems to suggest that the Boston Police Commissioner be named by the Mayor rather than by the Governor. Both recommendations ought to be adopted by the Legislature. The city of Boston should be conducted from School Street, not from Beacon Hill. Otherwise, all pretense of democratic home-rule is vain.

Legalize Home Loan Bonds

"Boston Evening American:

"Some banks and some mortgagees in Massachusetts will not accept Home Loan bonds unless they are guaranteed by the United States government. Many homes are in danger of foreclosure. Action at this session of Congress is imperative. You can help by publishing names of Massachusetts Senators and Representatives and asking the people to write them.

"W. L. SMITH,
"43 Allston Street, West Medford, Mass."

Mr. Smith has seen much evidence that the Boston Evening American is actively interested in saving homes from foreclosure and that is no doubt the reason why he asks this assistance.

The Boston Evening American believes with President Roosevelt that the United States government morally guarantees all its bonds and that a legal guarantee of them is unnecessary. We also agree with the President that so long as some of the banks decline to accept the bonds in the place of their home mortgages because the bonds are not legally guaranteed, Congress should remove this excuse by establishing the legal guarantee.

The relationship between the banks and the home-owners who fear foreclosure has greatly improved in Massachusetts during the past two weeks. The banks which now decline to accept the bonds, which prefer the auctioneer's red flag and the ousting of poor people into the street, may now be counted on the fingers of one hand. These delinquents will come into line when they get it into their heads that an active government bond, paying a regular dividend of four per cent, is preferable from an economic viewpoint to a frozen mortgage. They will be actuated by the cold business of it if not by a sympathetic interest in the suffering of the distressed home-owner.

Stamping Out Child Labor

Now that the Massachusetts Legislature has settled down to business, it may be expected to ratify the child-labor amendment to the constitution of the United States.

The Legislature, much to its credit, has hit upon the policy of submitting these vital fundamental policies to the people for final decision. This is the democratic way of doing things, and, therefore, the sensible and conclusive way. The people may be relied upon to vote with unselfish instinct and good judgment.

The child-labor amendment, in its present form, originated with a great citizen of Massachusetts, the late Calvin Coolidge, and it was adopted by Congress and submitted to the States during his presidency. Mr. Coolidge was thoroughly familiar with the exploitation of child labor and during his term as governor he signed the forty-eight hour law to improve the conditions under which women and children labor in the mills, factories and workshops of Massachusetts.

We have had here for more than a generation the most progressive labor laws in this country. Mr. Coolidge wanted to see the same system exist throughout the Nation. He realized, among other facts, that Massachusetts with its fine laws, was suffering from the competition of other States which manifested only the desire to wring as much work as possible out of the little bodies of its children of tender age.

The NRA has done much to harmonize and unify these working conditions the country over. Some nineteen States have already ratified the Child Labor Amendment. But these working conditions will not become fully harmonized and permanently beneficial to the women and child workers until thirty-six States have embedded the amendment into the constitution.

Massachusetts should do its part this year by ratifying the amendment.

Cut Our Costs Again

Government costs are high in Massachusetts. The people of our cities are paying twenty-five millions of dollars annually in excess of the cities of comparable size elsewhere in the country. This statement is made as the result of a survey recently concluded by Thomas L. Hinckley, who was director of municipal and industrial research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mr. Hinckley finds that the payrolls are loaded with useless employes. Some two millions of dollars are annually wasted by piecemeal buying of supplies in the cities which obdurately refuse to establish a central purchasing agency. In only five of the thirty-eight cities is there a centralized authority which gives the mayor power over all departments and thereby holds him responsible for the success or failure of city government.

Mr. Hinckley's estimates, we believe, are pitiably weak. The cities and towns of Massachusetts together slashed their appropriations by forty-four millions of dollars, or 16 per cent, last year, and nobody will say there has been any loss of effective community government as the result. The National government has since poured in millions of dollars for relief work and the communities should correspondingly cut down their appropriations for welfare relief. The plain fact is that another slash of forty-four millions could be made and our cities and towns would be as effectively managed as they are today.

The city and town officials do not want a central state purchasing agency, such as Charles P. Howard suggests. Such a consolidated system of purchase of supplies and materials would eliminate the "cut" and other forms of graft. But that is the very reason why we should have the system, whether the city and town officials want it or not.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24—New York's most tireless party attender is doubtless Maury H. B. Paul, whose nom de fantasie over society columns is Cholly Knickerbocker. A bounding, cherubic bachelor, he might be Stephen Leacock's horseman who vaulted his mount and rode off in all directions.

O. O. McIntyre

He is among the few society editors to grace the Social Register, and although his pen upon occasions is tipped with vitriol he rarely offends his silky audience. It is likely many years since he has been out after dark without high hat and other complements of full evening dress.

In his incessant giddyap he may attend a flock of cocktail parties in an afternoon, drop in at a dozen dinner parties that same night and be at the finish of several after theatre triumphs of civilization. These intrusions do not prevent him from turning out several columns daily and a few pages Sunday.

Paul lives with his mother in the Sutton Place section and journeys to the Riviera and Palm Beach with seasons. Instead of becoming wan, he grows ruddier, appearing always in a well-barbered glow of good health. And few writing men get so much fun out of their chore.

In his juggling days, W. C. Fields —who was doing dumb stuff when Harpo Marx was in unmentionables —was in almost constant rehearsal. I remember in my old Midnight Frolic press agentries how every morning, at 9, Fields arrived to rehearse what appeared a casual comic cliche. A rubber billiard ball he cued would hit the cushion and rebound into his hip pocket. The stance and timing had to be of eyelash closeness. He performed it with such nonchalance it appeared his easiest trick. Yet it was practised for nearly a year before the public saw it.

And I wonder what the theatre's collapse has done to Shorty, Fields' gnome-like and putty-nosed stooge, always a part of his act? He was Fields' dresser, masseur, handy-man and personal jester. So fervent was his enthusiasm for his employer he would dress quickly and join the stage door gapers just to see Fields walk out to his car.

Listen World!

By Elsie Robinson

GOT UP BLUE. Was wondering what the heck. Began looking through some old trade journals. Ran across this story, and it yanked me out of a tail-spin! Maybe it will do the same for you.

Elsie Robinson

"A poet once strolling near the outskirts of a large city came upon a stone quarry. For a time he watched the operations in the big hole — the blasting, the removal of stone out of the pit, and finally the actual cutting of the stone. After a time, the poet engaged the workmen in conversation. He asked three men the same question, 'What are you doing?' The first said, 'Earning $5.00 a day.' The second replied, 'Cutting stone.' However, the third paused before he answered, and then, with a sparkle in his eye, proudly stated that he was building a cathedral."

"WHAT AM I BUILDING? WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT? WHERE IS ALL THIS WORK AND WORRY GETTING ME?"

Each day you asl. these questions with increasing bewilderment; sometimes, with sick anger and despair. And you're not alone. Everywhere other people are wondering the same thing about their lives.

Life's so short! A few years, and then we're over. And we want, so desperately, to make our mark before it is too late. Each one of us wanting to make his or her mark. But what chance? Life's so crowded; so hurried! How much can any one man or woman, or the work of any one man or woman, matter?

"WHAT AM I BUILDING? AM I BUILDING ANYTHING? DO I AMOUNT TO ANYTHING? IS ANYTHING I DO WORTH WHILE?"

Standing over your dishpan—bending over your filing cabinet—plodding down, through the mud and mist, to the south pasture—fighting your way, through the subway crowd, to your shabby niche in some office building, those questions pick and pester like malicious ghosts.

And where's the answer? You look for it in vain in sink or card file, hav rack or ledger. Yet there, in those monotonous chores, lies the record of your life.

"That's all I amount to!" you say drearily to yourself. "After all my fine dreams, this is where I've landed. Wasting my life over jobs that don't mean a thing to me or anyone else."

That's what you're saying and thinking, isn't it? And each time you say it you feel a little duller, a little more discouraged, and something in you cries out more bitterly at the humiliation and futility of it all. Just as something in those stone-cutters cried out against the senselessness of spending precious life hacking at stone.

But one man saw the truth. His back ached, as theirs ached. He, too, was blinded by grime and sweat. He, too, must have longed to throw down his tiresome tools and be off to those great, free adventures he had dreamed of as a boy. Yet, in spite of all that, he saw—beyond the dreariness, drudgery and discouragement; above the darkness of a quarry pit—through to the towering glory which HIS work was making possible.

HE WAS NOT JUST CUTTING STONE. HE WAS BUILDING A CATHEDRAL! HE WAS NOT MERELY HEWING ROCK OUT OF A MOUNTAIN SIDE. HE WAS RELEASING BEAUTY AND WONDER AND ECSTASY IN THE HEARTS OF MEN! HE WAS CLEARING A WAY FOR GOD!

* * *

And because he saw that truth, "the Truth had set him free"—as it always does. It had set him free from resentment and bewilderment, drudgery and discouragement, and had filled him with pride and contentment and a growing sense of power.

His job was as monotonous as the job of the other workers—BUT LIFE HAD MEANING, BECAUSE HE HAD HAD THE COURAGE TO STAND UP AND LOOK, THROUGH ALL THE MUCK, FOR THAT MEANING.

You, too, can either "cut stone," or "build a cathedral." You, too, can waste your life in resentment and humiliation over dishpans, shovels, ledgers, filing cabinets.

OR YOU CAN BE A 1934 PIONEER. TAKING YOUR PLACE IN THE NEW ARGONAUTS' TRAIL, HELPING TO BUILD AMERICA—CLEARING THE WAY FOR GOD!

LITTLE GIRL'S BEDTIME

Little girls just turned eleven
Should go to bed at half-past seven.
But generally they incline
To staying up till half-past nine.
The dreadfulest of every dread time

At evening Janet's strength will rally
Her active little mind produces
Innumerable strange excuses
Designed in one way or another
To get an extra hour from mother.

Sleeping to Janet seems like madness.
Unwearied yet by care or grieving
She hates the very thought of leaving
The earth for just a single minute,
So much there is that's lovely in it.

Though little girls just turned eleven
Should go to bed at half-past seven
I find they generally incline
To staying up till half-past nine,
Which proves that nothing drab or dreary
Has spoiled their lives or made them weary.

Human Side of the News; The Sacred Dragon

By Edwin C. Hill

News picture cameramen, hastily sent to Scotland by the old Thunderer of Fleet st., the London Times, prowl for days along the shores of Loch Ness, one of the series of lakes which connect the North Sea with the Atlantic Coast. Their assignment is a strange one, even for newspaper cameramen, for they are under orders to find and photograph a creature which should have been extinct millions of years ago, one of the family of dragons which once were lords of the earth.

Day after day they lug their heavy camera equipment along the 22 miles of Loch Ness' length, peering over its steely waters, and with no result. And then, just as they are about to abandon the curious adventure, they detect, far out in the lake, something dark and moving, something enormous, something they cannot put a name to.

Shaking with excitement they rig up the camera and train it on the creature which is disturbing the waters, breaking the surface in long swells, something with a weirdly small, snakelike head and a long, swanlike neck and a vast, sinuous body.

So into the news he comes again, this survival of the old dragons. That he exists, whatever he is, there can no longer be much doubt. The chief Constable of Aberdeenshire has issued orders that no man may shoot or otherwise molest this monstrous amphibian which has been seen churning the lake, and whose footprints have been marked on the strand of the lake.

TOURISTS, OF COURSE

His huge bulk is taken for granted, and gentlemen arise in the sedate House of Commons and question the Ministry about him.

Hundreds unite in testimony that they have seen him—ministers, naval officials, fishermen, farmers, sportsmen, newspapermen. Tourists from all over the British Isles are flocking to Aberdeenshire and to Loch Ness, eager to get a glimpse of this marine monster which is no longer legendary—fifty feet long—stupendous, appalling.

This extraordinary incident might suggest that even sincere scientists are often too hasty in assuming the impossible on this old earth, or in the seas which lave it.

The great dinosaurs have passed. Tyrannosaurus Rex, the king tyrant lizard, the most destructive life engine ever evolved, is imbedded in the strata of millions of years ago. Gone also is brontosaurus, the thunder lizard, which was a hundred feet in length, weighed 40 tons, and was the largest beast that ever walked the earth.

But the sea serpent of Loch Ness is of their blood and kin, and one imagines that doors are locked tight and prayers are said very prayerfully along the shores of that link of the lovely Scottish lakes.

* * *

Twelve years ago, in the Valley of the Kings in old Egypt, Arab workmen, toiling under the watchful eye of English overseers, broke into the hitherto unviolated tomb of a king who reigned in Egypt more than 3,000 years ago. They came, finally, through a series of gorgeous chambers, to the last resting place where the king, Tut-Ankh-Amen, and his queen lay wrapped in sheeted gold, and all about them such lovely objects of gold and precious stones as men hadn't laid eyes on for long centuries. A treasure trove of the ages.

Thrilled and dazzled by the marvel of their find, the white men who directed the expedition which had found and opened the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen observed with only passing interest the legend written on the wall of the chamber where lay the king of ancient days:

"Death shall come on swift wings to him who toucheth the tomb of Pharaoh."

The treasures of art and science held a little later the British nobleman, George Edward Stanshope Molyneaux Herbert, Earl of Carnarvon, who organized and financed the expedition, died suddenly at Cairo from an insect bite, so the world was told.

And presently Howard Carter, noted Egyptologist, Lord Carnarvon's aide in the exploration, was stricken with some mysterious malady, the victim of some unnamed poison. He recovered after a long illness.

And then began a series of inexplicable fatalities. Reginald L. Wendell, secretary of Lord Carnarvon and his wife's own brother, died suddenly. The death list grew and grew, until, just the other day, the 20th man of those who had part in breaking open the tomb which was sealed by a warning and a curse passed from life at the age of 53—Arthur Edward Weigall, distinguished author of "Cleopatra," "Marc Antony," "Sappho of Lesbos" and "Alexander the Great."

SOMETHING TO PONDER

According to English newspapers there was something mysterious about the illness which killed him. The cause of it could not be traced. There are the facts.

Although Howard Carter, one of the three surviving members of the expedition, derides any suggestion that King Tut-Ankh-Amen or his priests could have invested the tomb with a curse which could kill after 3000 years, or that there was any possibility of death-dealing germs having been placed in the tomb when it was sealed 30 centuries ago, the uneasy feeling remains that there is something about the opening of the tomb, its violation, stripping it of its treasures, which is beyond the horizon of human reason, just outside the drawn circle of the rational.

Ancient indeed, going back to the childhood of mankind, is the belief in superstition, if you like, that evil falls upon him who violates the tomb of the peaceful dead. One thinks of the epitaph of William Shakespeare:

"Cursed be he that moves my bones."

Aeronautics Bureau Victim Of Political Control

By James T. Williams, Jr.

This is the seventh of a series of articles on the aeronautics bureau of the Department of Commerce, the sixth of which appeared yesterday.)

Having waited until the extra session of the new Congress adjourned last June to select a successor to Col. Clarence M. Young to assist the secretary of commerce in administering the air commerce act of 1926, Mr. Roper has been able to keep to himself ever since then the reason for the appointment of the Hon. Ewing Y. Mitchell of Missouri to that office.

MEDICAL EXAMINERS

Evidently Mr. Mitchell came to his new office under the impression that it involved a very close association with the headquarters of the Democratic national committee. At any rate, very early in his term he began consulting the son of the Secretary of Commerce, who for some time has been the executive secretary of that committee.

It was following a consultation between Mr. Mitchell and several of Secretary Roper's political appointees, who were then serving as assistant directors of the aeronautics branch, that an appointment was made with Executive Secretary Richard F. Roper at the headquarters of the Democratic national committee to discuss ways and means of replacing the medical examiners throughout the country. At this consultation it was explained to the political "smart alecks" present that these medical examiners had been designated in utter disregard of their political affiliation.

They were selected after an advertisement had been placed in one of the best known medical journals of the country. This advertisement requested physicians and surgeons who had made a study of aviation medicine and were willing to accept designation as medical examiners in the aeronautics branch to write in to the Department of Commerce and send recommendations from their local medical societies and a statement of their professional qualifications.

The Aero-Medical Association, as soon as its members heard what was under way, went to the public with a warning that gave Assistant Secretary Mitchell pause. And the resolutions of protest they adopted at Chicago against that part of Secretary Roper's first "reorganization," which had to do with the medical examination of pilots, sent this ultimatum to Mr. Roper, Mr. Mitchell and the then political appointees to the newly created positions of assistant directors:

"The selection of medical examiners of the Department of Commerce has heretofore been based upon ability and training, and political considerations played no part.

"The army and navy permit their pilots to be examined only by those medical officers who have received special training in aviation medicine. The longer a medical examiner has acted for the Department of Commerce, the greater his experience and ability, and therefore the greater his value to the department.

A WARNING

"The removal or appointment of medical examiners for political reasons would result in unsatisfactory, unstandardized examinations that would be to the detriment of aeronautics in general and result in an increased accident rate."

Nevertheless, Democratic senators in Congress were notified, either by Secretary Roper's department or by Executive Secretary Roper's office at Democratic headquarters, or both, of the names of physicians and surgeons who made up the list of medical examiners in their respective states.

Whether they were asked to offer recommendations for replacements, or rather suggestions, will probably not be known until an outraged public sentiment compels the Congress to turn the light of an impartial investigation on Secretary Roper's series of alleged "reorganization" of what Congress intended to be a non-political and highly efficient agency of the federal government.
